THROUGH THE YEAR we experienced trying times. They weren't always good, and they weren't always bad. There were times when we were a bit confused or uptight, along with the amusing and entertaining moments.

After school the students rushed out of the building as fast as possible. Teachers such as Mr. David Murphy, our Athletic Director, often sighed in relief as the day ended. In the winter, snow piled quite high, creating a problem for travelers and pedestrians alike.

But everyone survived. During hectic weeks, our daily schedules were not easy. When we planned events back to back — nevertheless, we all made it Through Trying Times.

Through Trying Times

GATHERING AT THE water fountain were students who anticipated a long, hot day ahead.

STUDENTS MILLED AT the main entrance, sometimes even in 90° temperatures.

Through Trying Times

In the Beginning . . .

SEARCH FOR IDENTITY

Old enough to be responsible for younger brothers and sisters, yet not old enough to be on their own and make all of their own decisions . . . Struggling to be accepted yet trying to maintain their own identity . . . This is the world of high school teenagers! Facing the issues, deciding their own morals and beliefs, finding out who they are and where they are going and just plain growing up.

Through all these pressures, how do they find themselves? What do they do to pass the time and relieve those awful pressures?

Some try to find themselves by using drastic methods to block out the Trying Times of life. Attempting to avoid responsibilities and facing life head on. Unfortunately for many, alcohol and drugs seem to be the only answers.

While some try to avoid trying times, others confront them and stand up to them. They attempt to grow up too fast by avoiding social events and high school life.

Others just take it as it comes. Living as people, still looking and searching for themselves, but doing it in their own way. Taking each (trying time) as a new opportunity to look, learn, search, and find.

As we continue to search, some will succeed. Some will push and endeavor to make something out of themselves. Some will succeed at life; however, some sadly will not. Some will continue in the patterns that they have grown accustomed to and some will change their patterns.

Each of us is searching and no matter how we go about it and whether we succeed or not life will continue; as we will, in going Through Trying Times.

THE MARQUEE OF Eisenhower stands to the west side of the building, stating the name of the school many love and many dread.

AS THE BELL rang, Angie McDermith leads the students into the building to start yet another school year.

THROUGH TRYING TIMES

The Year Under Way . . .

Surviving the Times

Besides the local pressures, citizens of all places had to learn to adjust to the fast-paced living of the new era.

Computers had already begun their immense expansion throughout every corner of the world. New "gadgets" that were to be magical helps here and abroad popped up on shelves at all stores. New "styles" of talk, clothing, and music were becoming popular (or notorious in the eyes of some.)

Students were faced with several different situations during the school year. Whether it was the fear of asking what's-her-name to Homecoming or the anxiety before Mr. Nelson's pre-calculus exam, pressure was there. Sometimes rivalries existed. At other times friendships were so strong that nothing could tear them apart. Nevertheless, that social pressure existed and students had to learn to deal with it.

How did they survive the times? Some went into organizations at school. Others participated in church-related activities or school presentations. On a sadder note, some chose to keep their pressure in a bottle and did nothing to relieve it.

This is our story. In the next 176 pages we will show how we survived and what things we did in the meantime. We are the survivors and the leaders Through Trying Times.

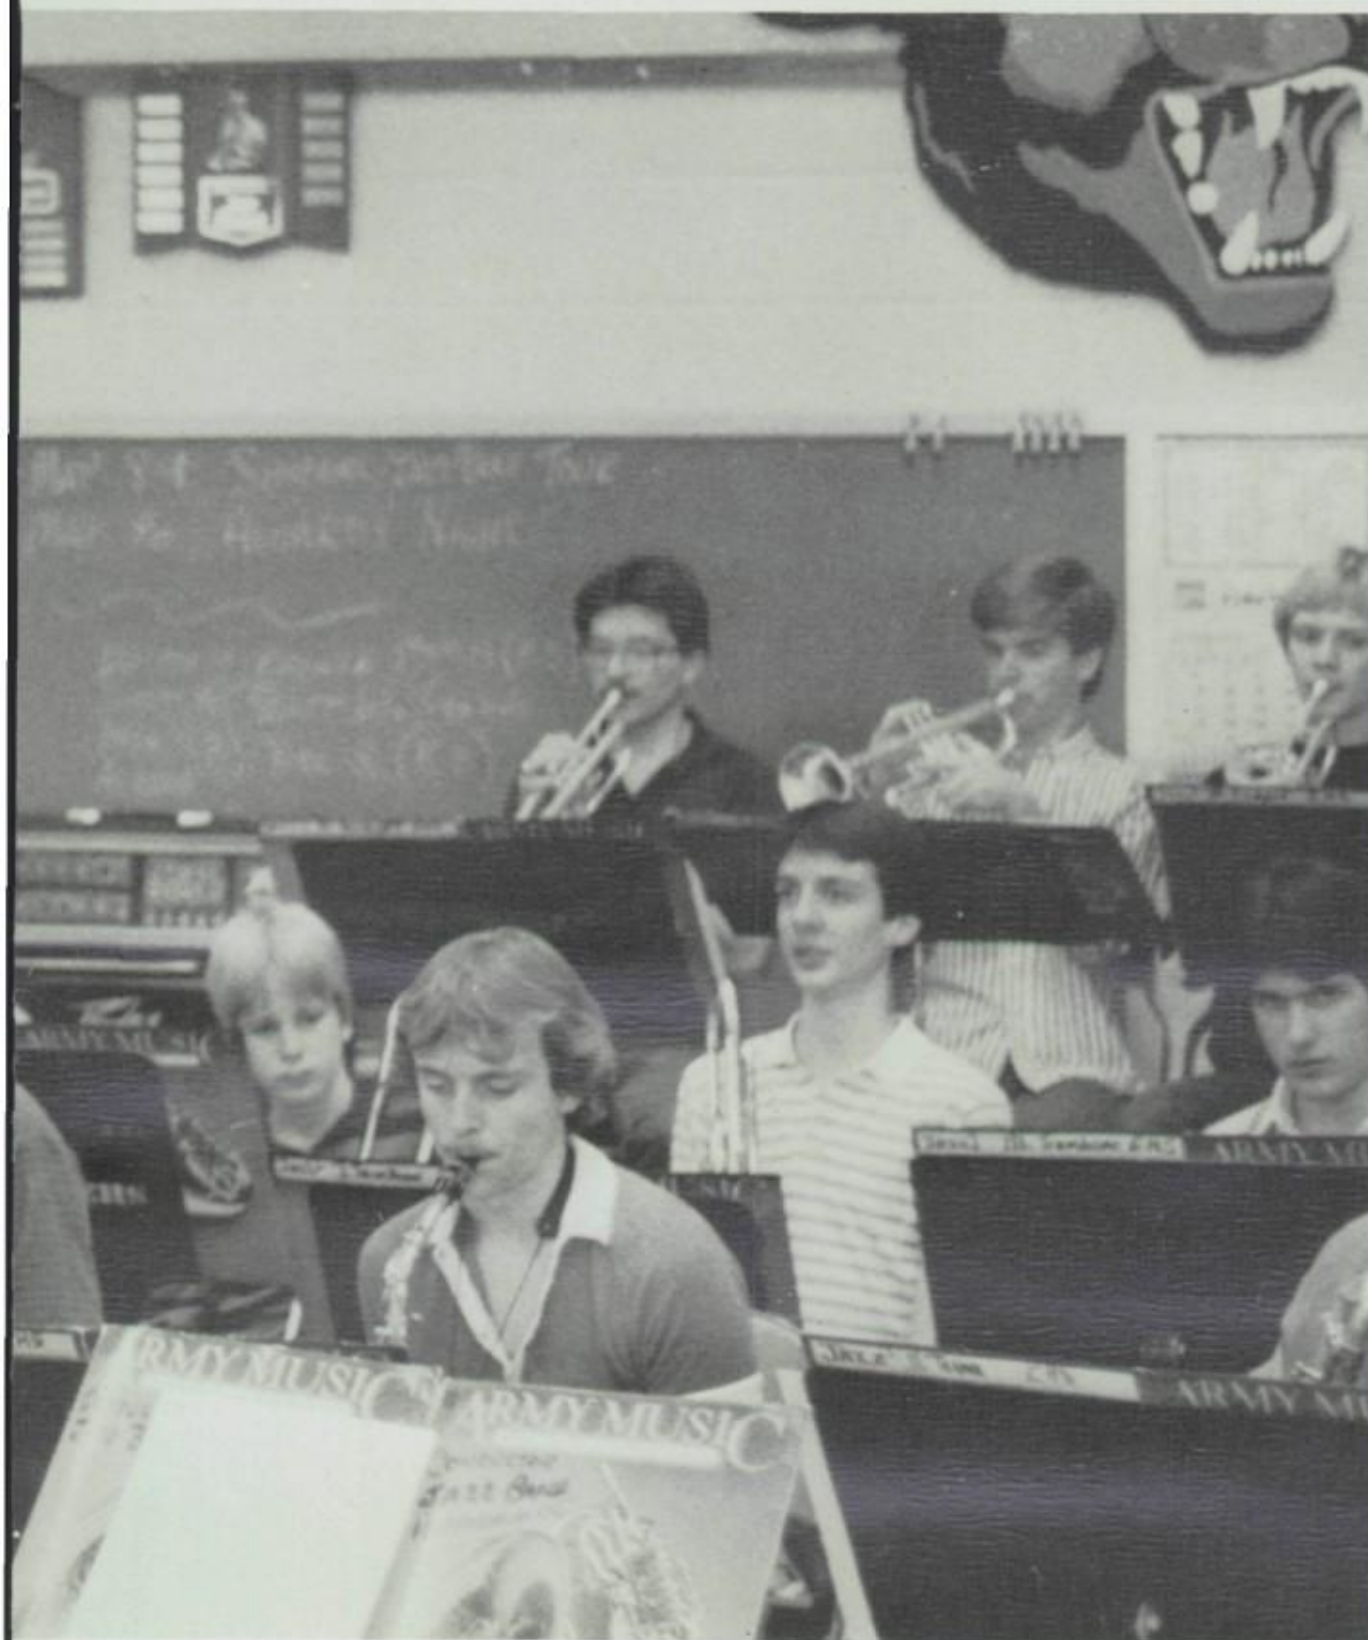

AFTER CLASSES WERE through for the day students gathered in the main hall to end the day in fun.

AFTER SCHOOL students were anxious to seek "refuge" in the air conditioned homes during the immense heat.

Through Trying Times

FROM THE BEGINNING Of the school year the band practiced with Mr. Streight; from John Richardson's Sax to Todd Martin's trumpet, all good sounds for performances.

BEFORE CLASSES STARTED, students gathered in front of the building to talk about their summers.

MR. SCOTT, TALKING with his choir students, began to prepare for excellent performances in the spring musical, "Once Upon A Mattress."

PREPARING FOR THE NEW YEAR was Dean of Students Mary Jane Madix.

THROUGH TRYING TIMES

Times to Remember

Students will remember all the good and bad times they had in high school. We all look back at our high school years with some joyous memories, and some sorrowful ones.

A student's high school life consists of more than his six classes of work. Our attendance at the school functions matters, whether these functions are games, plays, concerts, or dances. But occasionally we have to get away from even these school-related activities and do things which are pleasing to us on our own time.

When we are adults we will remember our first Homecoming Dance. We will remember those funny talent show acts, those "tear-jf" "tear-jerking" musicals, and the hilarious nights out with friends. We may look back and literally crack up from fads & fashinos that were "in" when we were in high school.

We will remember that we kept our books closed until late at the night, when we decided to study; we will remember the undogly crowd at the student parking lot after school. Those afternoons after school on cold days when our car doors were frozen shut and the ignition wouldn't start will also be "good" memories.

But we will also realize that we successfully pulled Through Trying Times. We will realize that we stuck together through those times; we never gave up and we saw a light at the end of the tunnel. The togetherness will have made binds that, if the relationship had been important at all, will still be strong.

AT THE HOMECOMING assembly the Cheerleaders practiced as the juniors and sophomores filed into the gym.

Through Trying Times

RECREATIONAL GAMES, SUCH as the wheelbarrel race with Lorriane Mason and Brian Byers, were a fun part of the Homecoming assembly.

THE HOMECOMING DANCE was chaperoned by parents and faculty members of the high school.

CONTEMPLATING THE LONG day of classes ahead were Doug Nichols and Sharmie Ford.

A SONG & DANCE number was performed by Jennifer James at the Sights and Sounds of '83.

THROUGH TRYING TIMES

Changing Times

Have you ever looked at one of your parents' old yearbooks and thought, "How different they looked!"? It has always been funny for a generation to look at pictures of a previous generation and be amazed — and amused — at the differences in styles.

Hair styles have changed almost every few years since the turn of the century. In the sixties, the popular bouffant hair style was particularly common. Very short hair was "in" for boys at the beginning of the sixties; by the time the late sixties/early seventies rolled around, the length of the hair had greatly increased.

Changes in clothing went from plaid slacks and suits to today's "prep", which, in some parents' opinion is similar to the dress of the fifties.

Even styles of eyeglasses have changed. From small, wire-framed glasses to the large black horn-rimmed glasses, glasses have changed from decade to decade. They turned to "designer" frames for a while, then the fad became contact lenses, which made a big hit and are becoming increasingly popular today.

Every decade the trend has changed. Fads have come and gone. Next decade will be different yet. Your kids will probably look at your yearbook and laugh the way you did at YOUR parents.

THE HAIRSTYLES OF the 1960's were much different than those of the '80's.

CLOTHING STYLES, SUCH as plaid suits and bell-bottoms were quite popular.

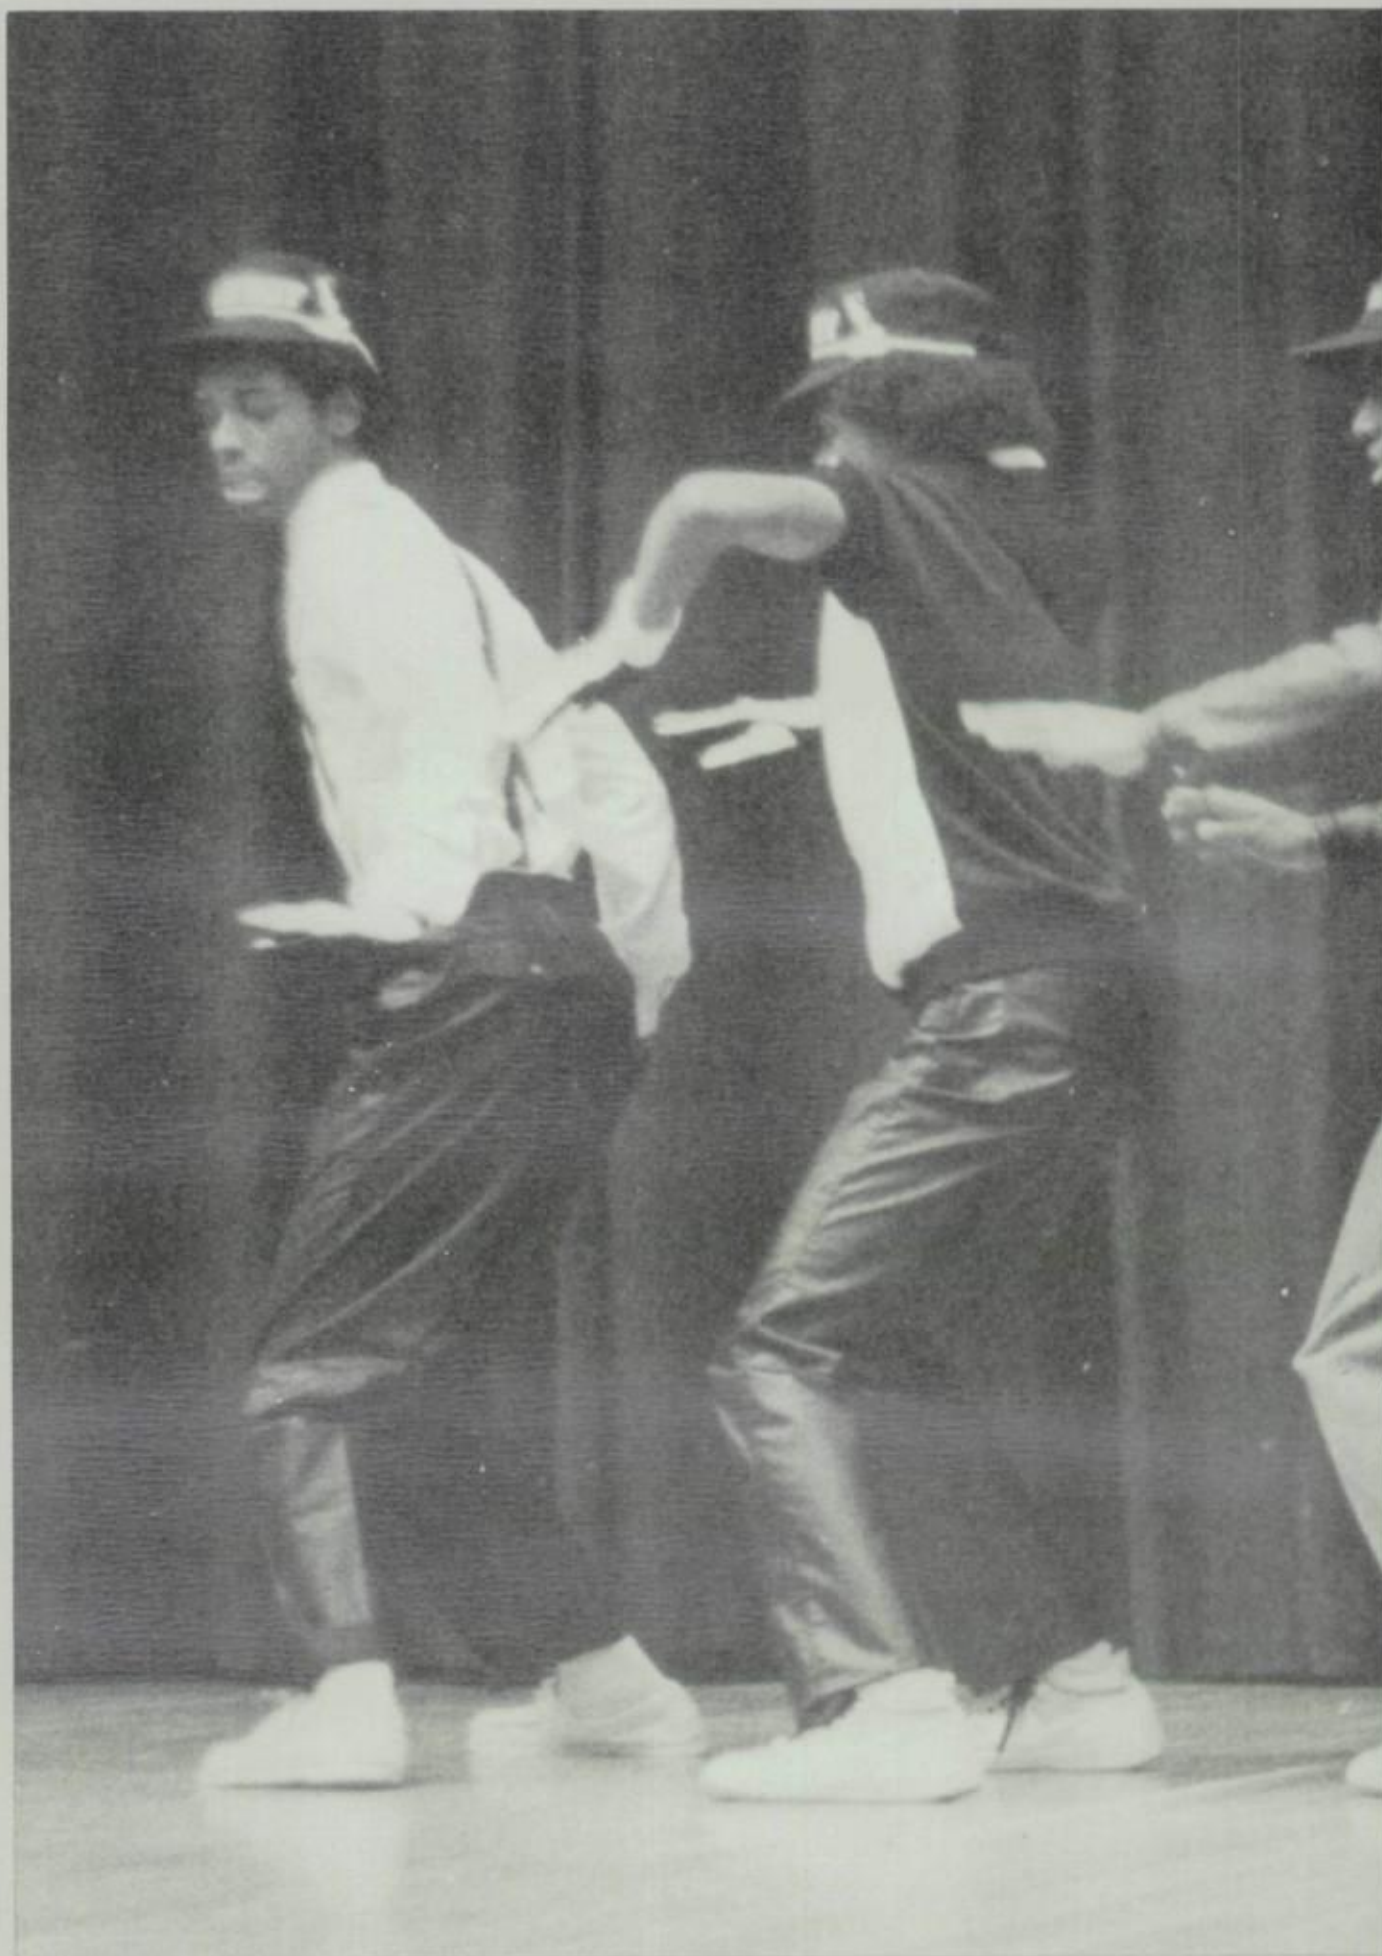

LONG, STRAIGHT HAIR and wire frames were popular in the early 1970's.

CLASSROOMS OF THE late 1960's appeared much out of date.

EVEN AS RECENT as the mid-seventies, styles of hair and looks in general have changed immensely.

Breaking and Ticking

Several "troupes" of "breakers" performed for us at the assemblies we had during the year.

Break dancing was just one of the many new fads students had picked up on in the past year. The dance itself is a blend of martial arts, acrobatics, yoga, and pantomime.

Some students said that it got its name from the exertion they put out, so therefore, the name "break" came in.

Some dance terms in break dancing are "ticking", "pop locking", "centipede", and "bite". Whether the dancer was making his joints jerk abruptly, spinning on his back in a curled position, or "stealing" moves from other breakers, students here at school enjoyed it. Others who were asked thought that "break-dance" came from the "break" or truce declared by gangs, so that the rival gangs could compete in the dance contests.

"Breaking" can be done almost anywhere, and to almost any type of music with a beat. The students really seemed to like break dancing, and they will probably continue to "break" for fun for a long time.

Sights and Sounds

The Talent Show has long been a part of Eisenhower. It started in 1968 as a student/faculty show with just a few acts and progressed to the 1983 Talent Show with over twenty-five acts.

This year the tradition was carried on with some of the show's greatest acts ever. Acts such as "The Charleston" and the "Boogie-Woogie Bugle Boy" brought back the era of long pearl beads, long waistlines, and lonely G.I.'s far away from home.

The J.V. cheerleaders brought us back up to date with their dance routine "Dancing in Heaven" in black lighting. The Pantherettes pulled the past and present together by doing a dance routine to the old, but new, "Putting on the Ritz."

Amanda Harres took us to the faraway land of Hernando's Hideaway, where we were intrigued by stunning guitars and caballeros.

The "Pet Shop" and "Double Trouble," two skits, captured the audience's attention with their wit.

There were many solo acts; these included: Pam Crews, Delta Sanders, Jennifer James, Jennifer Schafer, Mark Muschal, Kris Hebel, Holly Corrington, Krista Cummins, Angie Delgado, and Matt McBride.

The audience was amused and amazed by a gymnast, bands, mimes, and dances that were excellently performed.

Veronica Dunn, the fantastic card girl this year, charmed us with her great personality and wit. And to complete the show, the traditional male ballet was performed.

As in years past and in years to come, the Eisenhower tradition, hopefully, will be continued with success and enjoyment for all.

Forever Yours

The Homecoming Spirit was started this year by the assembly presented on the afternoon before the big game. The cheering assembly got us "in the mood" for Homecoming, and it raised our school spirit in addition to preparing the athletes for the game against Bloomington later that same day.

The spirit halls contest again was won by the senior class. They displayed their spirit by a blinking collection of lights and paper streamers by the yard.

At the assembly, cheerleaders balanced the traditional hoop for the hard-hitting football team to smash through in a gym full of screaming fans. Certain selected, talented members of each class volunteered to participate in the wheelbarrow race. "Pies" in faces were the rewards in the All-Class yells contest, led by the Cheerleaders. The Senior class had the loudest yell, entitling senior class president Pat Pownall to administer the pies in the faces of all underclassmen Presidents.

A new event this year was the egg toss, played with water balloons. "Butterfingers" who messed up got drenched with a huge spray of water.

The theme for the 1983 Homecoming was "Forever Yours Faithfully." At the assembly Queen Ellen Blake was crowned. Attendants were Helen Fox — Senior; Kelly Carr — Junior; Vicki Crani — Sophomore; Dena Brown — Freshman.

From the beginning of the assembly to the romantic dance, memories of the 1983 Homecoming will remain "Forever Yours." — by Tammy York.

JACK BLYTHE LOST the water balloon toss at the Homecoming Assembly as Karen Clements laughed.

A POM PON Squad member propelled a willing volunteer to become a 3 mph wheelbarrow.

HER ROYAL MAJESTY, Ellen Blake, nodded approval of the Homecoming festivities.

Forever Yours

The gym was draped in orange, yellow, and brown streamers accentuated by clusters of the 1000 multi-colored balloons that the student council purchased. The backdrop of the court was a large red rose surrounded by the word "Faithfully," 1983's Homecoming Theme. The band "Spectrum" played a variety of fast songs including Billy Idol's "White Wedding."

The dance was filled with many memorable things. For instance, Matt McBride was singing "Breaking away" and Greg Kelm, Eisenhower's own answer to John Travolta, jammed and "took off" his clothes.

The queen's solo dance was magical with the mirrored balls sparkling of light while "Faithfully" floated across the air waves.

Close to the end of the dance the balloons that had been captured in a net to come cascading down upon the crowd were released. Somehow, the balloons had gotten stuck! Panic!! Salvation came by way of some industrious fellows taking off their shoes and throwing them into the net. After several shots, they succeeded in freeing them. The balloons came down in a trickling colorful array. Minutes were spent tromping and stomping through the balloons. The band slowly wound down the evening as the students filtered through the gym doors.

PM Magazine

Izods, "penny-loafers," and the lack of belts: three of the many signs of "Preppy." Preppies were fairly common in our school environment this year, and PM Magazine's Susanne Kay knew this. She wanted to film it on her popular TV Program.

She and her camera crew came in early December and set up in the main hallway during lunches. The "preps" gathered around to display peglegs, their way of dress, a fad once quite popular here.

The broadcast was December 14, 1983. The program exposé was about common fads in general, not just EHS's preppies. We were just a portion of the entire program.

An embarrassment to some yet really a pride booster to others, the controversy about PM's filming took place. Some students hated the idea that Eisenhower would be noted for its "preppies," and wore anti-preppy clothes such as sloppy, unmatched jackets and jeans. To them, it was humiliation. Others seemed quite happy; why should it be embarrassing if the preppy look was in?

Nevertheless, the publicity was good. Students, whether or not they were Preppy, watched the program just to see who would appear and what would be said. Jokes circulated for a while, but soon everything was back to normal. The "Exposure of the Preps" was closed once again.

MARION HOLLANDER TOLD of her horrible fright as Alex and Mrs. Kilroy listen attentively.

DON'T DRINK THE WATER, directed by Shirley Kistler, was a wonderful comedy put on at Eisenhower this year.

The story took place at an embassy in a communist country. The Ambassador, against her better judgement, had left her son in charge, promising him it would be "a quiet two weeks." Mrs. Kilroy, the Ambassador's efficient assistant, disliked having a bumbling fool for a superior, and made her feelings known.

Into this sticky situation barged the Hollanders. The communist policeman, Kojack, was trying to arrest them on a trumped-up charge of espionage. Alex granted them asylum and they began the long waiting game with the communist blockade.

Meanwhile, the embassy's staff was in an uproar. The chef refused to let Mrs. Hollander into the kitchen and Mr. Hollander refused to eat any of the chef's food. Burns, the butler, spent half of his time acting out his thoughts because his mouth didn't seem to be in a direct line to his brain!

Just as Alex was trying to straighten this mess out, a new problem arose. The Sultan of Bashir, a very important man, arrived. The Sultan, offended by Mr. Hollander's blunt comments, left the embassy at once.

Everything came to a close as Alex threw a party to allow the Hollanders the opportunity to escape.

Walter and Marion finally received their chance to escape, and they took it. Susan, however, felt that her place was with the man that she loved, so she stayed with Alex at the embassy. The chef and Burns, after a surprise romance, married and left the embassy, while Father Drobney, the unpredictable priest, continued his asylum in his magical room.

Dedication and Sacrifice

Sports were a very important part of the school year. Not only did they provide entertainment, but they encouraged the athletes of Eisenhower to be competitive and strive for victory.

From football in the autumn to baseball in the spring, the athletes depended on the fans and the fans depended on the athletes to boost the school spirit and make us proud.

These dedicated athletes sacrifice an almost endless amount of time and effort. Team members had to be willing to cooperate with the coaches. Studies had to be done after practice or before classes the next day.

The coaches supplied a lot of energy to their teams. They had to encourage that team to push forward, even when the times looked rough. Whether the competition was against an undefeated high school or one with few wins on their record, the coaches worked hard with the aspiring athletes to get them in the best possible shape.

At times the whole process seemed totally worthless. Hard practices seemed to discourage the athletes more than it did to build their confidence. And at other times almost everything went quite well. The teams never gave up and their efforts were never slacked off. Through Trying Times they continued to work hard to represent our school.

Pain and Stamina

It was late afternoon, the first day of football practice. The temperature blazed a hot 103. It was the second of two practices that the team had.

By the end of the practice, the team was so fatigued, it was tough making it to the showers. But once they made it through the summer heat and two-a-day practice, the hard work and dedication came much easier.

By the time the first game of the year rolled around, they weren't completely prepared, but they knew they had a good chance to win. They did! The Panthers had a satisfying win over Stephen Decatur, 12-7.

After their first win came a string of four defeats that were hard to swallow. Three of the four games they should have won, but bad breaks and bad efficiency prevailed. They knew if they could play opposite the way they had for the last three ball games, the next game would be no problem.

That's the way the game turned out: no problem. As they took the game over Lincoln, 33-17, they showed their determination. After that, winning the next three games was a piece of cake. With scores like 13-0, 31-15, and 34-14, the Panthers showed style, courage, and stamina.

During the MacArthur game they stopped Al Lawson for a gain of far less than a hundred yards, well below his average for the season.

Throughout the season, the team went through extreme heat and bitter cold. They had their ups and their downs, but when everyone was down on them at 1-4, they showed enough character and talent to win the next games.

The football team, having gone through all this, finished the season with a 5-4 over-all record. Their work was well done!

DURING A FOOTBALL game, the Eisenhower Panthers showed their stuff.

Young but Courageous

The 1983 Eisenhower Freshmen football team enjoyed a very successful season, even though it was their first time playing together. Most of the players were new to the sport and most of them didn't know each other. For this reason, the game of football was going to be a learning experience for all.

Practice sessions, starting one week before school started, ran twice a day. The initial enrollment the first day consisted of fifty members, which is about average. However, because of the vigorous workouts and hot weather, the team was narrowed down to 34 players before the first game. Suffering during the practice sessions, this group of young men learned very quickly and executed their jobs as well as could be expected. By the first game, these players really could be called a football team.

The team learned more things than just winning and losing football games. They learned about team work, discipline, sportsmanship, and also about themselves. The team played every game hard and carried on the Eisenhower name very respectfully.

Unlike the Freshmen team, the Sophomores came back with a good record. Mr. Thorpe, the coach of the team for many years, led the team to a 5-4 overall record. Coach Thorpe complimented the Sophomores when he said "This team had the right attitude and respect for the coaches."

Having all this confidence behind them, the football team for 1984-85 should be a winning team. Their future is looking bright. Written by Angie Kovach.

Golf Coach aids team; Cross-Country 7-6

There were close to 20 people on this year's golf team. Of that 20, there were six starters who attended all the meets. There were qualifying rounds in the beginning of the year to determine who the six starters would be. Out of all those in the rounds, Mike Locke, Brian Habbe, Dave Zacheis, Rick Martin, Jeff Oost, and Bruce Sattley made it as the six starters.

Mr. Jim LeMaster was the coach. He is a pro and competed in tournaments himself. Many of the players believed the fact that he was a pro helped give them an advantage over other teams.

According to one starter, "Excellence wasn't stressed; participation and opportunity to play were."

FIVE MEMBERS OF the Varsity Golf Team compare courtyard snow to golf greens.

Although Eisenhower didn't do as well as they hoped this year, team members were confident that all the underclassmen coming back next year would help them to do better.

Finishing with a good season, the cross-country team ended the season with a 7-6 overall record.

The team was almost twice the size as last year's team. Mr. Bob Smith, their coach, is also a runner. He ran with the team and provided comfort and encouragement with this typical comment, "Success comes most often to those who run the straightest line between two points."

Having fresh talent in the freshmen, next year's team can be expected to be a good team.

Spikes, and Bumps

Spikes! Kills! Aces!

These are a few of the terms used in the game of volleyball. This year's Varsity Volleyball team, consisting of 11 players, ended their season in style. Finishing with a 14-10 record and a regional championship, they proved that hard work paid off. Starting practice on August 18, before school even began, they ran, hit, served, and strained for at least 2 hours, twice a day, including Saturdays.

When the first game rolled around, they weren't as ready as they thought they were, falling 11-15, 15-12, 5-15 to Bloomington in a conference game. Coming back in the second game against Cenntennial, they won by a wide margin, 15-6, 15-6.

This year's varsity team had many outstanding performers. Leading the team in most serves and most aces was Marsha Blacet. Blacet and Kathy Deardorff shared the lead in serving points. In spiking, or "kills", Deardorff led with Blacet close behind. Tammi Patton led the team in blocks.

At the end of the season, Mr. Wilks gave out awards to these three members and a few other athletes. To Marsha Blacet and Kathy Deardorff went the MVP award, for it was impossible to choose one or the other. Also to these two went a special medal for lettering three years in this sport. To Missy Stone went the Most Improved Award, who accomplished the difficult task of going from a backrow bumper to a full time setter. To Tammi Patton went the Most Blocks award, with a total of 91. And last but not least, Kelly Ronnow was named the team captain, an award that goes to a contributor who doesn't get much playing time. The team proved to be a good one; many players will be returning for another good year.

ACCORDING TO MRS. Anthony, the Junior Varsity Volleyball Team had a five hundred season.

Pins vs. Balls

LINED UP FOR the Fall Assembly, the Eisenhower bowling team listen to Mr. Flaugh talk.

Serving, volleying, net play. These were just a few of the skills that Eisenhower's team exhibited this year. Mr. Chamberlain, the coach of the girl's tennis team, was just one of the reasons why the team was so successful. He had been coaching boys for the past ten years, but this last season, he coached the girls team for the first time. "There's not that temper problem in girls as there had been in boys," Mr. Chamberlain was quoted saying.

Their record being 9-3, he felt they had stressed the right aspects. They worked hard on the net play and strived to make their doubles much stronger. All the determination and skill paid off. Eisenhower won the Regionals, therefore, qualifying for state. Julie Berba and Stephanie Beherends won the Regional doubles and played four matches before they were eliminated at state. Shelli Jones and Barb Wuellner placed fourth in doubles at the Regionals, and Linda Wuellner placed third in singles.

Next year, Mr. Chamberlain planned to work on doubles especially, making a good record and improving the young players who would soon be the backbone of this team.

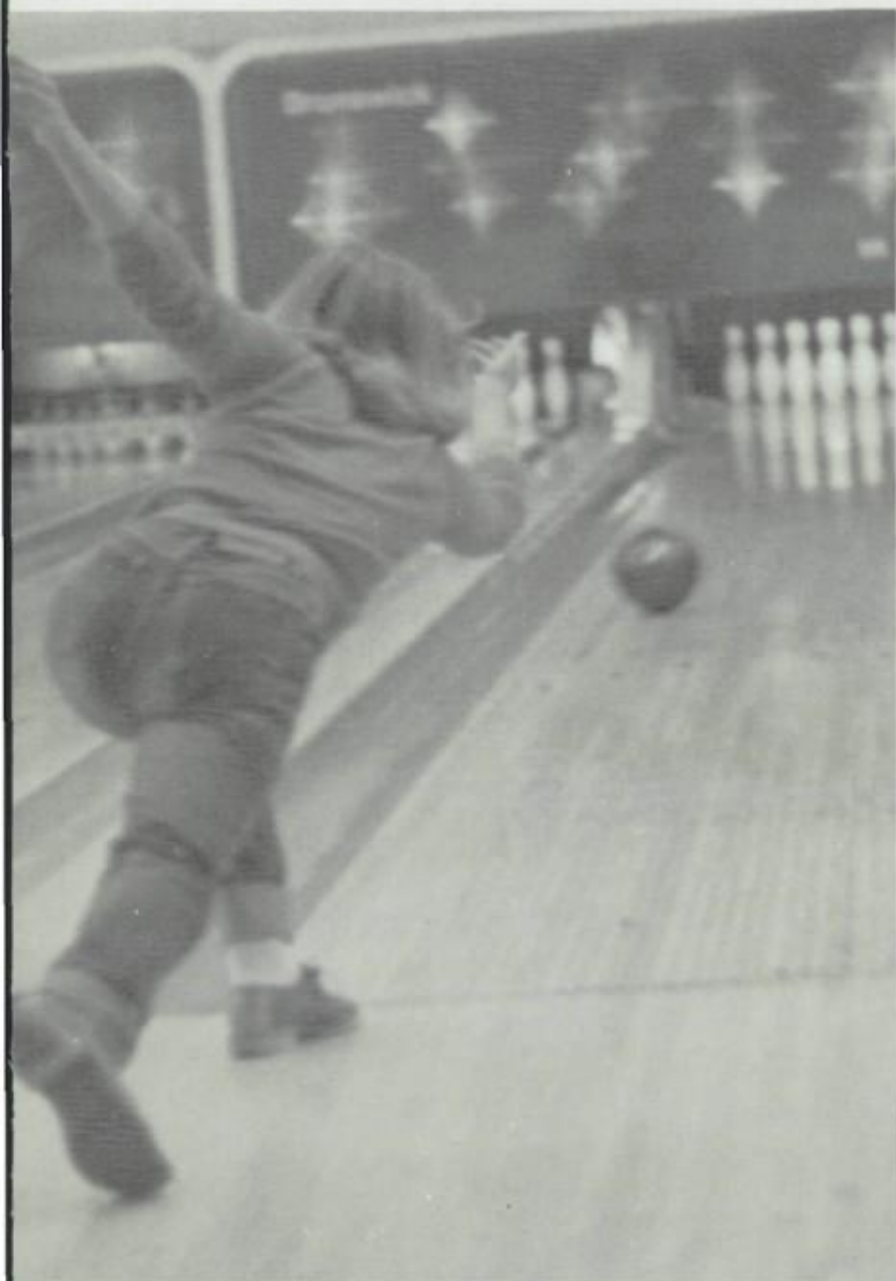

Overall, the season was seen by most to be excellent. Mr. Chamberlain enjoyed working with the girls as it was a learning experience for him, too. When asked what made a good quality team, his reply was "All the members supporting each other and the willingness to work hard for a purpose is a good team. I'm pleased with the season."

Coach Flaugh took seven girls up to Peoria on the 10th and 11th of February, for state bowling finals. The girls who went were Barb Wuellner, Linda Wuellner, Darla Henry, Melinda Poe, Kim Cookson, Valerie Bonnell, and Carolyn Thomas.

Talking with the Top

Trials and Tribulations of an Athletic Director

For the past sixteen years, Mr. David W. Murphy has been working assiduously as the organizer of all athletic events and all athletic teams at Eisenhower High School.

From this great number of duties, Mr. Murphy lists the following:

Directing and overseeing all the school physical education classes, and scheduling all the football, volleyball, basketball, wrestling, and all other games.

This includes asking officials to referee, and having substitutes ready in case of illnesses. Bus transportation is another large part of Mr. Murphy's job, which can often be a headache during a sudden snowfall or cancellations for other reasons.

Mr. Murphy enjoys staging contests especially between opponents evenly matched, since that makes a dramatic battle, and keeps the audience excited and happy, as well as giving the teams a chance to sharpen their skills.

Another big part of the athletic director's day is spent in advertising and giving correct information to the film and print media, making sure that posters and calendars are placed in the strategic spots all over Decatur, and then getting tickets ready in time for all games. When regionals roll around and cause March Madness every year, Coach Murphy's diplomacy comes into view as he uses the wisdom of Solomon to distribute tickets. He always gives preference to the present Eisenhower students over outsiders, because he feels that "School spirit is developed best by students actually participating in and watching sporting events."

Often as an underclassman himself, Mr. Murphy valued the lessons in life he learned in the area called sports. Even as a high school student in Robinson, Il, Mr. Murphy enjoyed and learned about all sports, as he was on the football, basketball and track teams in high school himself. While in college, he concentrated on basketball and track at E.I.U. where he also majored in physical education and minored in Social Studies, Health, and Driver's Education. His master's degree is the Masters Indiana S. U. Science and Education, all of which he has needed in his years of teaching.

Shoot the Hoop

Why would five tall guys, drooling with sweat, run around a gym floor bouncing an orange ball and trying to put it through a steel circle? They did it all for their favorite pastime: basketball.

Literally hundreds of cheering screaming fans filled the stands during the regular season. They had a great year. The team won many of their games away from school and the majority of those played at home.

A great deal of success was due to the outstanding support that the team had, but of course the only thing Eisenhower really had a lot of was superb basketball players. There were many long time players. Most of the varsity players had been around the basketball scene for the maximum of three or four years. Many of the underclassmen were expected to be around for the full four-years.

It took a lot of hard work and dedication. Being a basketball player meant having to eat late, and attend practices every night. Mr. Witt insisted, however, that the players keep up their grades if they still wanted to play ball.

All the basketball coaches wanted their teams to be the VERY BEST. This was a goal of all members of the teams, not just the head coaches.

Every game was loaded with fans; because of such great support the teams were greatly encouraged. Their games not only provided us with great school spirit, but they also provided us with entertainment in its highest form.

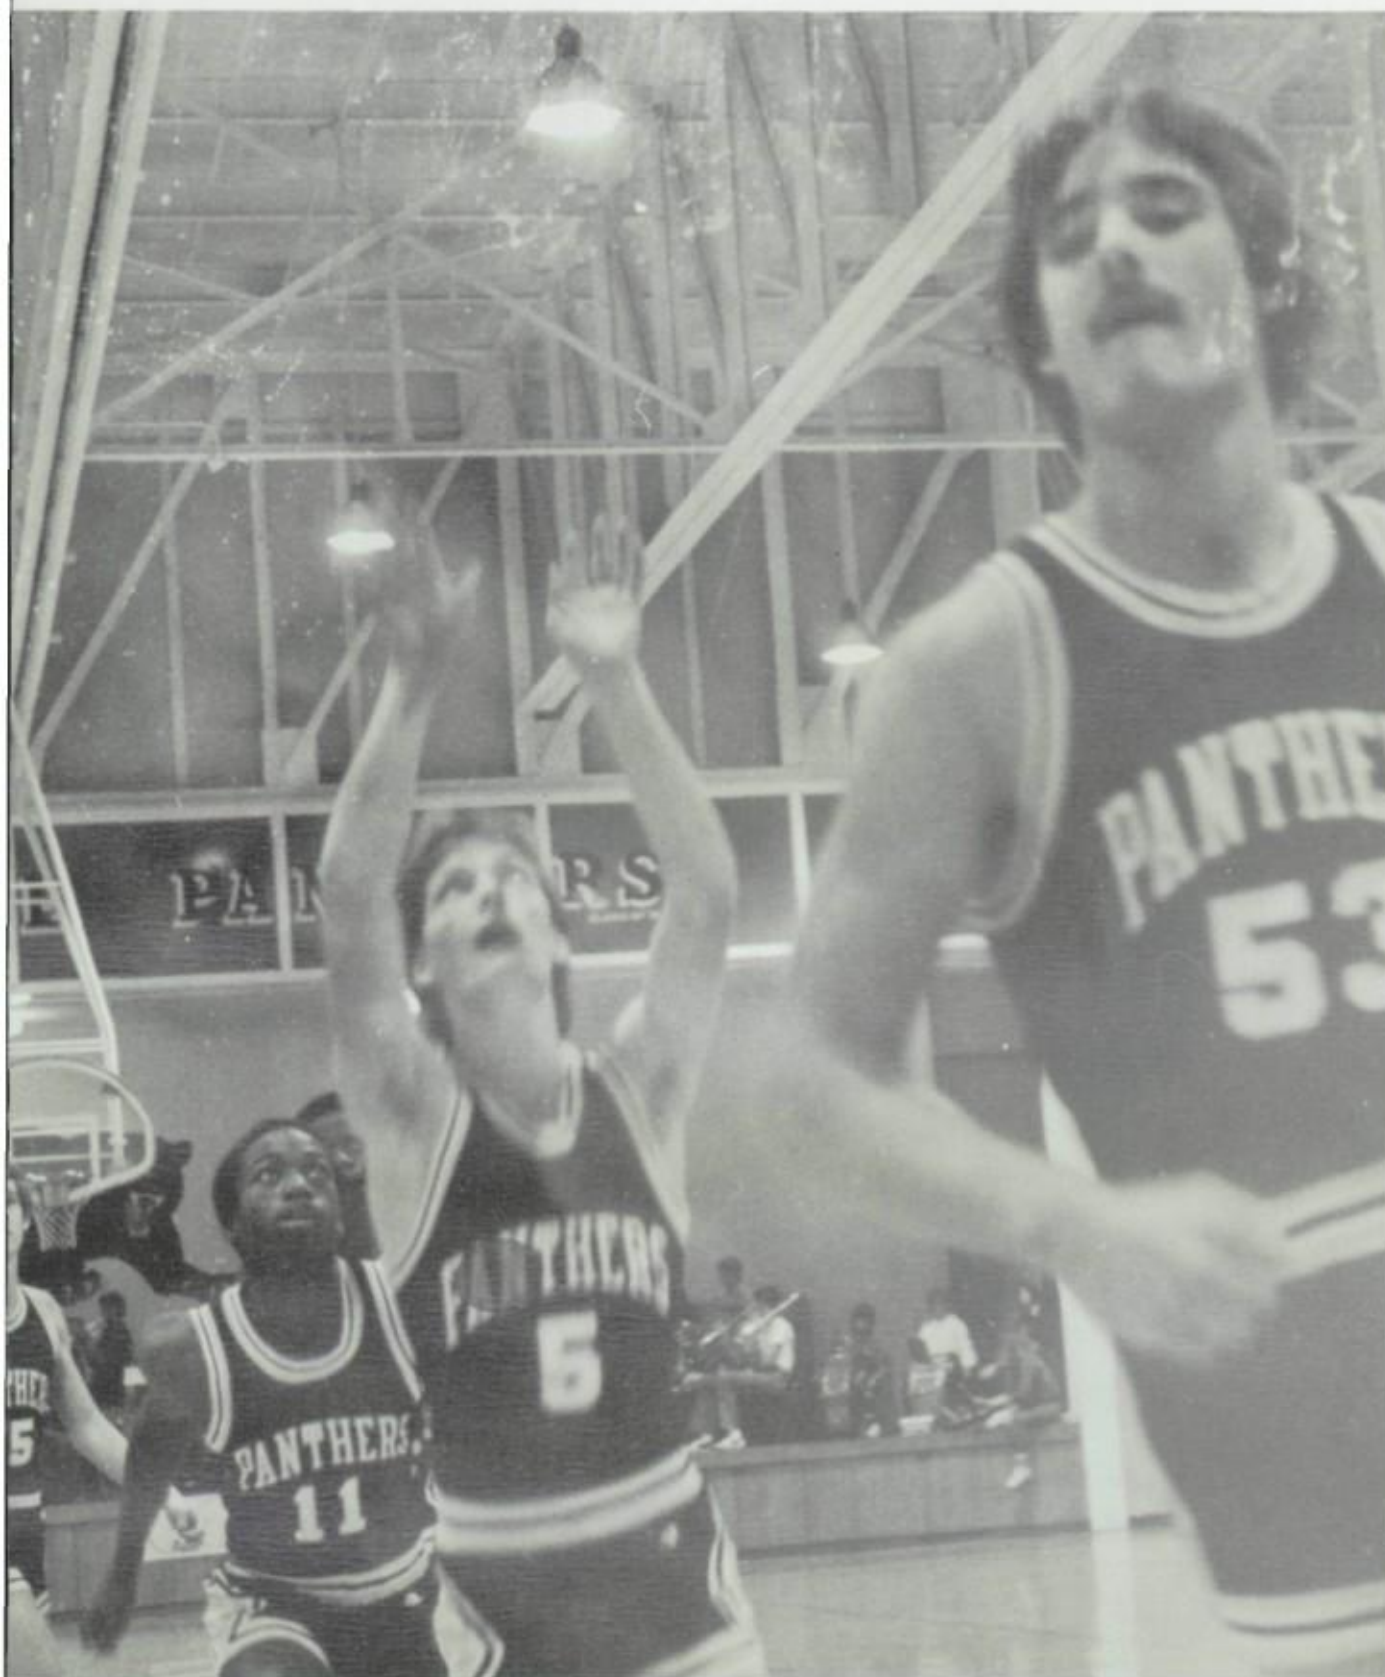

RON MEYER OVERJUMPS his opponent.

Wrestlers Match Muscles; Persistence pays off in pins

Intelligence, determination, and discipline are three vital characteristics of a potential top notch wrestler. Being able to endure losing a close match of physical contact is also an outstanding requirement of a wrestler.

Winning was not the only goal of the sport. Victory was important, but what really counted was each wrestler giving 150% effort all the time. Taking your opponent down and pinning him was the ultimate goal. In striving toward that goal, all the wrestlers achieved improved health and physiques.

This year Mr. James Cook finished his fifth year as wrestling coach. Despite some team problems in earlier years, Coach Cook feels that an abundance of summer training and "getting tough" will greatly improve the team's chances in the future.

The Junior Varsity team of wrestlers was coached by Mr. Matt Vandercar, an English department teacher's aide at Eisenhower this year. He remarked that his team had to follow the same responsibilities and try for the same goals as the Varsity wrestlers did.

Turnouts at meets usually were not spectacular, although the wrestlers themselves did much cheering for their fellow wrestlers. Their competition was always tough; the matches were simply won. If the team lost, it was to another good team and if the team won, it was still to another good team.

Wrestling is not just a team sport. Wrestlers go out for the team to gain individual satisfaction with each victory. Team work is no less important, but individual victories are a dizzying sense of accomplishment to be prized by any and every wrestler.

Wrestling takes practice, the will to improve, and an endless amount of hard work. Starting with basic skill and then building experience are the keys to success.

Lady Panthers Credit Zone Teamwork Plays

The Varsity Girls Basketball Team had an undefeated season this year. They were also good on height this year. They learned this year and some of them should be ready to play Varsity next year.

"We worked well as a team. I did well on my defense and offense, but my free throws needed some work," stated guard Flinn. Andricks thought her season could have been better, but was generally satisfied with this season. Bonnell felt that, "Teamwise, the team did well on zones but man-to-man needed to be worked on all season."

"The girls had been good about learning their plays, and I'm getting them ready for Varsity," stated Mr. Wilks.

The varsity team had eight players plus four J.V. players.

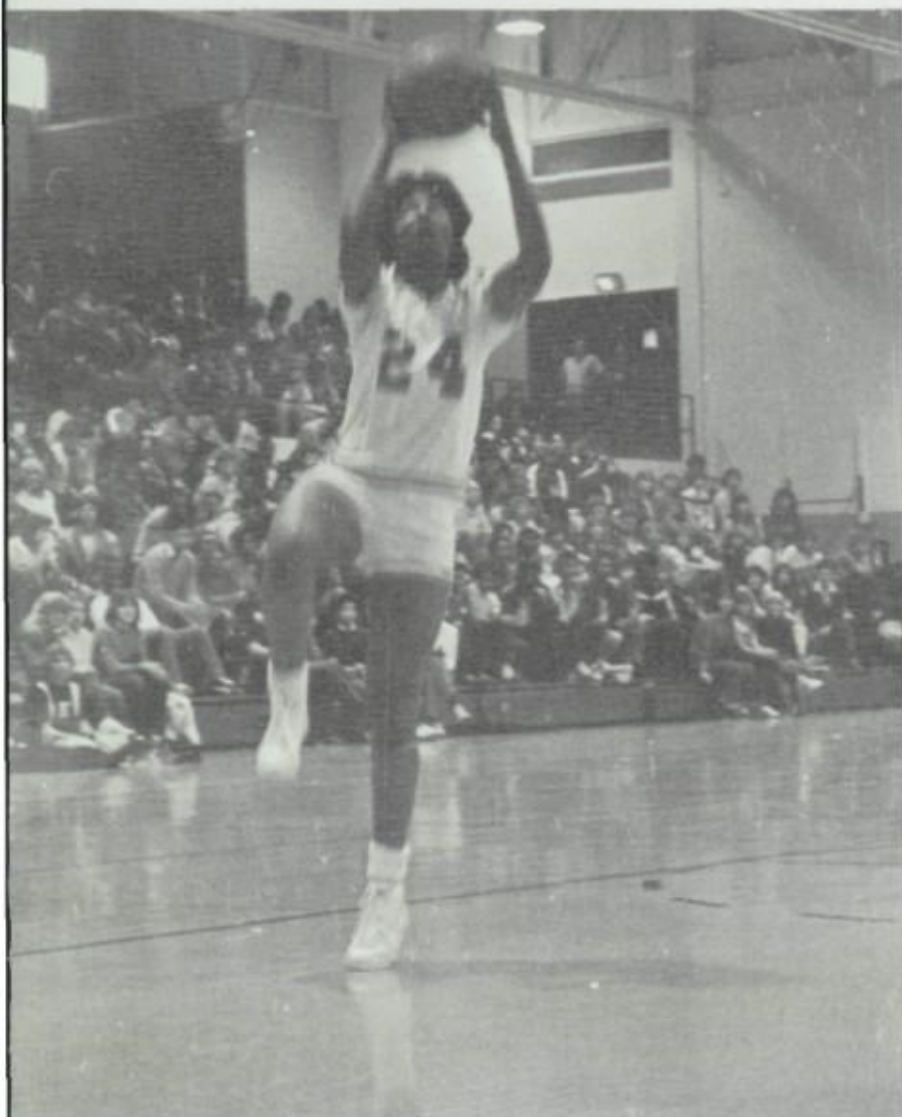

"I have improved on my rebounding, assists, and my defense," remarked Kim Harris. "I am still in the process of picking my college. It was a lot harder than I expected it to be," she stated. Forward Dawn Pitman, who really improved on her offense, defense, and shooting felt glad she had improved as well as she did.

Forward Patton does not plan on playing ball at college.

"We had a great year. We should have won a few more games," remarked guard Kathy Deardorff.

Miss Brooks was working on their mental aspects all season long, because she needed all her girls to give 100% in each game. One thing she really wanted this year was to have more school support during the season and not to wait until Regionals came around. by — Valerie Bonnell

Organizations Dedication and Deadlines

Being on any organization is a "trying" time in itself. Every organization requires a great amount of dedication and patience. Some of the organizations' main goals are to have "fun" all year around and others have to strive for completed work continually.

From being an assistant to working on the newspaper or yearbook there is a great deal of responsibility. Whether you have an upcoming deadline which demands immediate attention or direct orders from the leader of the organization himself, you'd better be responsible enough to complete that job.

Many times organizations are pressed for money and have to sell items to earn some income. Once they save some money they can begin to plan activities for a certain amount of time.

Togetherness is the key in surviving an organization. Often, members of organizations become like family. A great deal of caring and friendship is exchanged among the members.

Members of these organizational groups go Through Trying Times themselves; their jobs are laid out for them and they must be completed. Responsibility is a large ingredient in organizations — without it, there would be no one to finish the chore.

If a deadline is approaching, the pressure may be increased but work is sped up. The "togetherness" and dedication of the members will keep everybody going until everything is fine.

RODNEY AND JEFF argue about one of the questions that they were discussing.

THE ACADEMIC BOWL TEAM (NHS) works hard on studying for their meet.

MRS. CUSSINS HELPS Krista and other NHS members in looking up information.

Making the Grade: NHS

The National Honor Society, also known as the NHS, was a club that recognized the outstanding academic achievements of its members.

To be eligible to join the NHS as a sophomore, students must have had a perfect 5.0 grade point average. As a junior, a 4.8 average was needed, and as a senior, a 4.5 grade point average was needed. There were thirty-one members, who represented the top 5% of the school.

This year's officers were Rod Schanefelt, president; Krista Cummins, vice president; Kellie Cokley, Secretary; and Jeff Sprandel, treasurer.

The three main NHS functions were the induction in early spring, a picnic at the end of the year, and an annual dinner at which they "roasted" the teacher of the year.

Another activity associated with NHS was the Academic Bowl team. This team, with eleven members, competed in four meets. These meets were held at Hillsboro, Quincy, Richland, and Millikin. As Mrs. Heiden explained it, "In Illinois, more and more emphasis is being put on academic contests. The Academic Bowl team helps Eisenhower to earn recognition of its academic quality."

The seal of the NHS was a flaming torch over the letters CSLS. The flaming torch was the symbol of the purpose of the organization — to keep burning at Eisenhower a high ambition for the values of life, and to serve in consideration of others. The letters CSLS stood for Character, Scholarship, Leadership, and Service.

The advisors for NHS were Mrs. Julia Heiden and Mrs. Mary Cussins. — Todd Gillespie

What's News?

This year's PANTHER PRESS was revitalized with the brand new blood of the incoming freshmen. Out of the eighteen students that were on the staff this year, six were freshmen. One such freshman was asked about her feelings toward the newspaper. She replied, "I really enjoyed being on the staff. However, I don't like to get up early for the morning meetings, but who does? It takes a great deal of imagination to come up with new articles. It's very challenging." Other members went on to say that one of the best parts was being able to pick their own articles to write about.

The newspaper sponsored two dances. The Halloween dance, by JAMS, and the Easter dance, both were successful.

The fate of the essay contest was the same. The entries were based on the topic, "One thing I'd like to accomplish is . . .". Prizes were given to the top two essays.

The staff celebrated the end of the year with a bash for a year well done and to say good-bye to the seniors. Tim Deters, co-editor, said of his years working on newspaper, "Student publications have always been important. I have enjoyed writing for and being editor of THE ECHO, Lakeview's newspaper, and the PANTHER PRESS."

Mrs. Woods, the staff advisor, thought that it was a well-rounded year. The challenge was there with the PANTHER PRESS.

Being on the PANTHER PRESS takes dedication and time. All those who started on the staff didn't necessarily stay on it until the end of the year, but those who did found it a rewarding experience.

Speaking in Tongues

What was a very easy way to study the entire scope of a country or groups of countries? Studying a foreign language was how many students accomplished that.

All four languages offered at Eisenhower had a club. Each one did those things that taught the culture and language best.

This past fall, the Latin club went to a Latin convention in Collinsville. There they participated in contests ranging from "best-dressed Roman" to speech competitions. This summer, a few Latin students planned a trip to Europe, specifically Greece, Italy, and Switzerland.

The Spanish club also planned a trip to Europe, but they traveled to Spain. They sold items to raise money for small group trips and to pay for any other expense.

The German club offered an exchange program. German students came over to stay a short period of time with American host students, and then this summer, the Americans would go to Germany to stay.

The French club caroled at Christmas time. They cheered up the patients at the local hospital. The club also had a dinner of French cuisine, and they had a French speaker come and talk with them.

The foreign language clubs were places where students could study the different customs outside the classroom. The members had a great deal of fun and learned too.

Different Worlds

This year's American Field Service student exchange program occurred among seniors. During their senior year, students had the opportunity to live in a foreign country and follow their customs.

One of these students was Pierre Challier. He was born in Tours and lived in Blois, an average town of 60,000. His father and mother both work in education. He had a brother and two pets, a Dalmation and a "Garfield" cat. He graduated last year but was more interested in writing, acting, and singing than in attending college. He played rugby and tennis and enjoyed skiing and hiking.

He chose to come to the U.S. because he was interested in American culture. To him, this country offered many opportunities and freedoms.

His AFS experience was "something important in my life, bringing me to know myself better. My experience tells me that young people are not different around the world."

He hoped that people will always work for peace and show fewer prejudices. Together we all must aim for world understanding.

"We can make it if we try."

Learning about Life

The Social Science club was an activity designed so students could see and study local historical sites that they could not in a normal class.

In early October, the club took a walking tour of Decatur Street and Powers Lane. The first stop was the Powers mansion to see the extravagant architecture. They then moved to the home of Mrs. Hays whose house has beautiful interior design.

During late October, they traveled to John Ballog's place of business. He has recreated part of the lobby of the Orlando Hotel, Old Michl's Tobacco store, and many other old time businesses because he is a history buff himself.

The Social Science club also went to the Other Side, a Greek restaurant. There they ate Baklava, a very sweet dessert.

Around Christmas, each member of the club chose a country and studied its Christmas traditions. Frederique Roland spoke of her Christmases in France.

In the spring the club planned a historical trip to Springfield where they saw many governmental buildings.

The president of this club was Becky Finklea; its vice president was John Moore, and its secretary was Annette Bonds.

This club kept very active and accomplished much this past year. They are sponsored by Mrs. Marilyn Kostenski, 1984 winner of the DAR Outstanding History Teacher Award.

VOLUNTEERS PRACTICE SKILLS: Computer Club and Candy Stripers

Many thought that the only thing that the computer club ever did was play games, but this was not entirely true. The members did play games, but many times they were played only after they had been programmed in by the students themselves.

The projects that they did do were sometimes simple, sometimes very complicated. Some joined to learn a limited working knowledge of computers in general. Others stayed after school as long as possible to learn different, complicated computer languages such as Pascal and Grafth.

In this computer age, it was great to have students involved in computers not only for fun but also to learn without the pressure of a classroom situation.

Candy-stripers also leave the classroom to wear the pink and white uniforms seen running around the hospitals of Decatur.

Some joined to be candy-stripers because they planned a career in medicine when they were older; others joined to learn how to deal with people on a one-on-one basis.

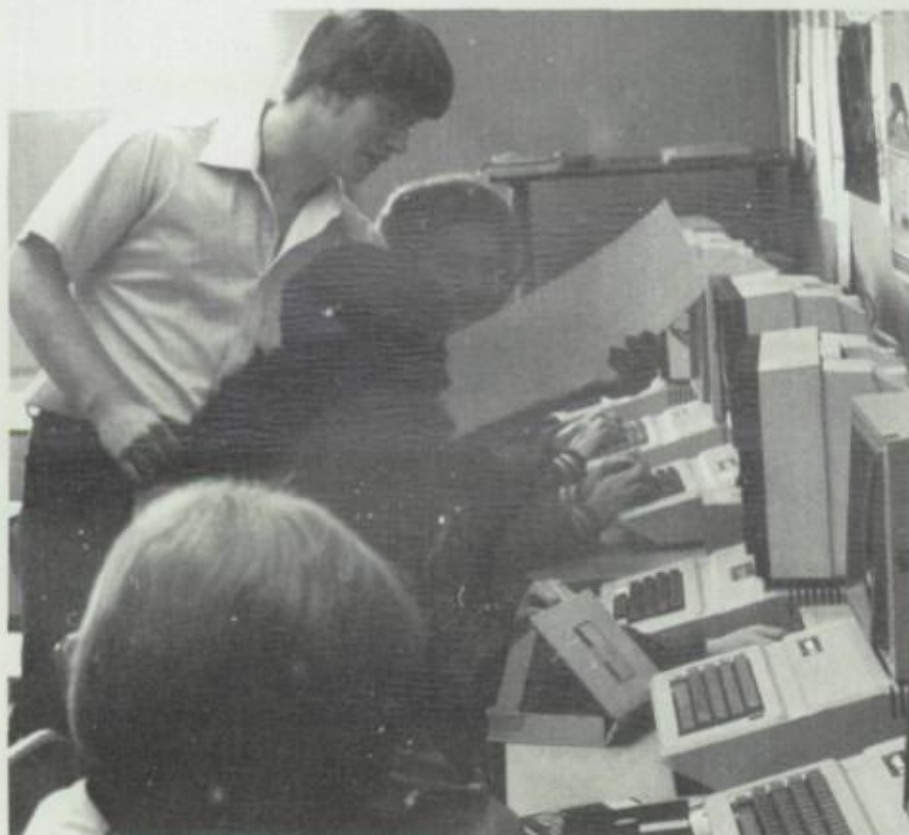

The candy-stripers had no easy jobs. They were the "gofers" of the hospital. Many times they knew more about the winding corridors than some of the doctors and nurses.

The Junior Auxiliary was a great help to all the staff at the hospital. They not only helped with making beds, passing ice, and delivering meal trays, but they did a great deal of fund-raising to to buy units for the hospital.

Candy-stripers always ended their days of cheering up patients by feeling satisfied they helped fulfill a vital need.

Cheerleading, Pom Pon, and Flag Corps

School spirit; It was talked about at every assembly, football and basketball game. Who worked hard at promoting all of this school spirit?

At football games, the flag corps performed in front of the band when they marched into a game and also when the band played at half-time. Their fluency in handling flags was extraordinary. They always received great cheers, and they kept in time with the music very well.

Pom-pon girls usually performed at the half-times of both football and basketball games. They made up their own routines from the popular songs that everyone heard on the radio. Their performances brought about big yells from not only the home crowd but also from visitors. They kept in perfect step with their own music, and they also marched in with the band at the beginning of the football games. The squad was rather large, and the only problem that was presented was the fact that there were so many talented girls to watch.

The cheerleaders were the big boosters in school spirit. They cheered at the sidelines; they cheered during time-outs and they had students screaming their lungs out to push the teams to victory.

Crowd-pleasers and spirit promoters, all groups, varsity or junior varsity, performed excellently throughout all the sports seasons. Sometimes it was hard to yell for teams when they were down, but maybe with all the yelling and the cheering they pushed the teams to victory. School spirit was raised with every cheer, yell, scream, twirl of the flag, and dance. Everyone was grateful that the school had such willing girls to cheer for the teams.

We're Working Together

At times, it was not clear what those few elected officers did this year. It all started at the beginning of the year when the student body voted for whom they thought would do the best job for their classes. Soon after the council was completed with four officers and five representatives, the work began.

Yes, they did have fun and loads of it at that! Only first, they decided the costs, times, and places for each and every activity.

If there hadn't been a council, school would just have been classes with no extra activities. Thanks to this group, dances, games, and assemblies were held.

An annual blood drive was sponsored by the Inter-City council, which was an event to see which school could give the most blood. Eisenhower won.

The Inter-City council was one that represented all the high schools. They met together to discuss problems and new ideas.

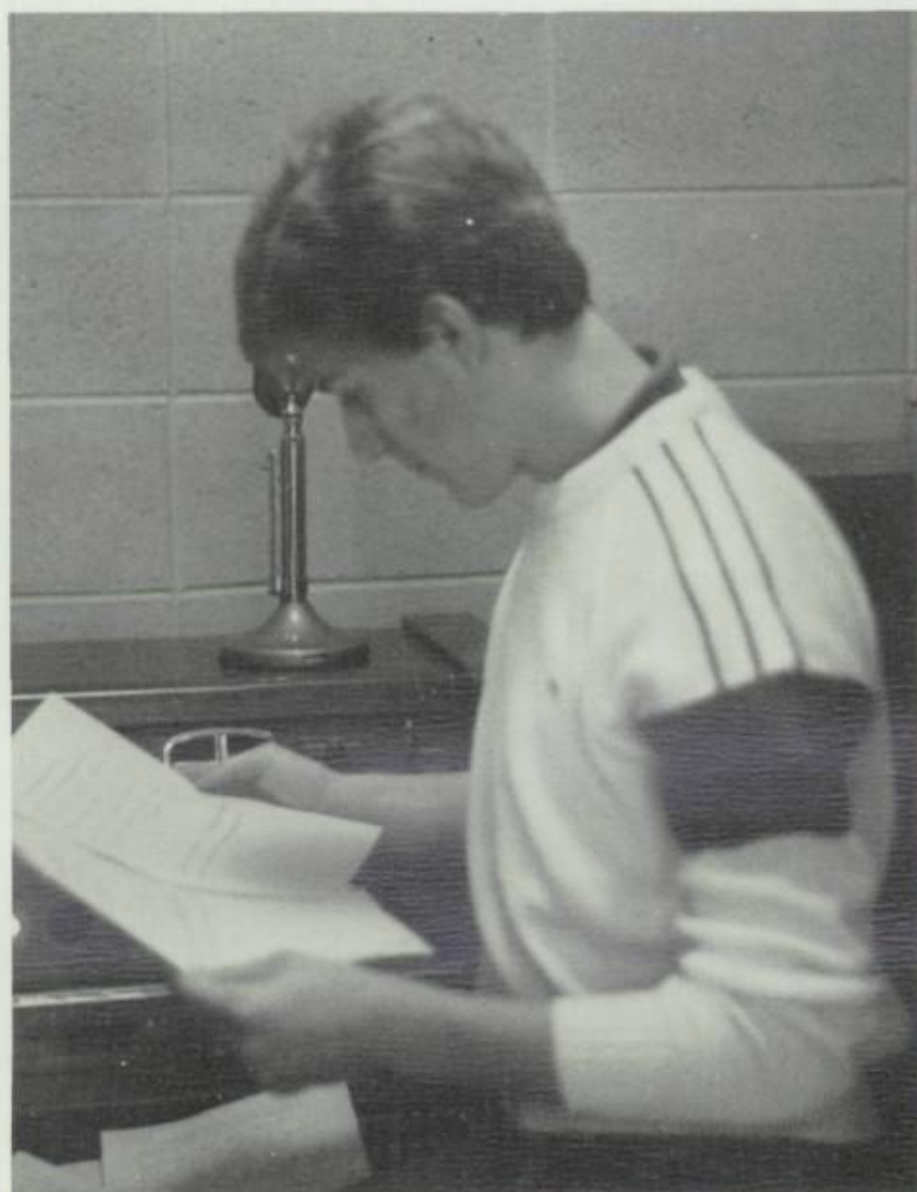

There were many other activities accomplished and improved by this student council. They helped make a great school year.

The Human Relations club was begun years ago to stop the race riots. If anyone had a grievance, they took it to the Human Relations members so they could find a solution. Over the years, the club changed its role from problem solver to morale booster. They sponsored dances, sold a variety of items, and held food drives over the past year.

With such clubs as these, students coped well with the everyday problems of school life. They learned about student government and made friends along the way. Their work was well done.

Acting Up

The Thespian troupe #1781 of Eisenhower High School is a member of the International Thespian Society. The name Thespians came from Thespis, the ancient Greek actor. According to legend, Thespis was the world's first actor. During a festival honoring the god Dionysus, Thespis stepped forward from the chorus to speak. This was the beginning of acting in a Tragedy.

The symbol for Thespians is two masks flanking a capital "T." The masks are like those used by the ancient Greeks to demonstrate emotions. The masks represent Comedy and Tragedy, the two types of plays performed by the Greeks. The capital "T" stands for Thespians.

Thespians were involved with the plays and musicals put on during the year. They also delivered Thespian Messages and Songs in the spring. There was an annual induction and awards dinner at which new members were inducted. Awards were presented to the best actors and actresses in the shows put on that year.

To be inducted, a Thespian must have been involved with two major productions, and have been voted in by other members.

There were twelve members of the Thespians. The President was Rod Schanefelt, the Vice President was Delta Sanders. Mrs. Kistler, who teaches acting and directed the talent show, was the advisor.

The Halls Are Alive with the Sounds of Music

"Sit up straighter and support the tone!" said Mr. Scott gruffly from behind the piano. The halls were alive with the sound of Eisenhower's four choirs.

From the very beginning with freshmen all the way up to the upper classmen in concert choir and Tiptones, Mr. Scott was there, improving their sound, projection, and everything else that made the choirs here, the best in town.

There was much more substance to the choir hours than just a class where the students sang the hour away. Many went to contests and competitions, and there was an abundance of concerts that they performed. One of those concerts was held at Christmas time when old-fashioned and new-fashioned carols were sung to bring the holiday season in right.

The students didn't use choir as an "out" to other classes. There were many who were seriously considering making music as their vocation in life. There were many graduating seniors who would pursue music in college.

The years of training that Mr. Scott gave his students paid off in big dividends. He had excellent students, and though ineligibility was like a huge plague to him, the year of music at Eisenhower was a year full of great harmony.

Playing with Time

"Think musically. Watch your key signatures. Play with dynamics. There's got to be a difference between forte and pianissimo!" commented Mr. Streight.

Those were the sounds that drifted through the halls from the band room. The once mediocre band program at EHS was transformed into a force to be reckoned with. Director Dennis Streight's goals were met this year. With a Symphonic band of over seventy and Concert and Cadet bands of thirty each, the band program gained depth.

At the beginning of the year, the Marching Panthers, the Symphonic band, made the band community sit up and take notice. They won first place at the Shelbyville Band Aids competition and third place in the annual Christmas parade, as well as being asked to escort Santa into the Hickory Point Mall.

With less than a month to prepare, the Symphonic band changed musical styles and added their fine performance with those of the Concert and Cadet bands at the annual Christmas concert.

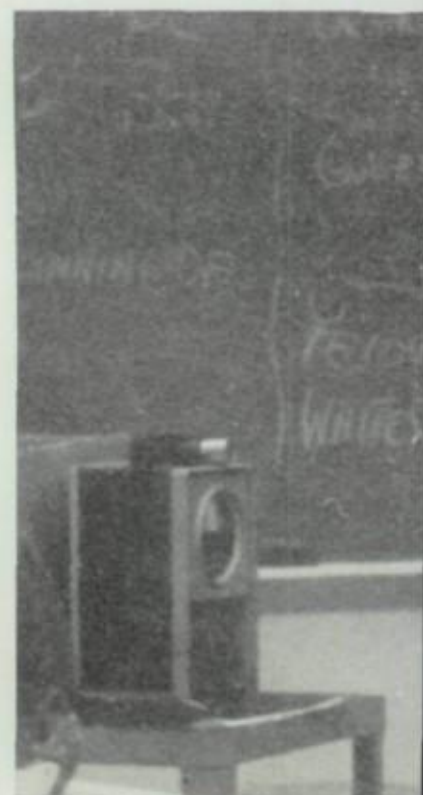

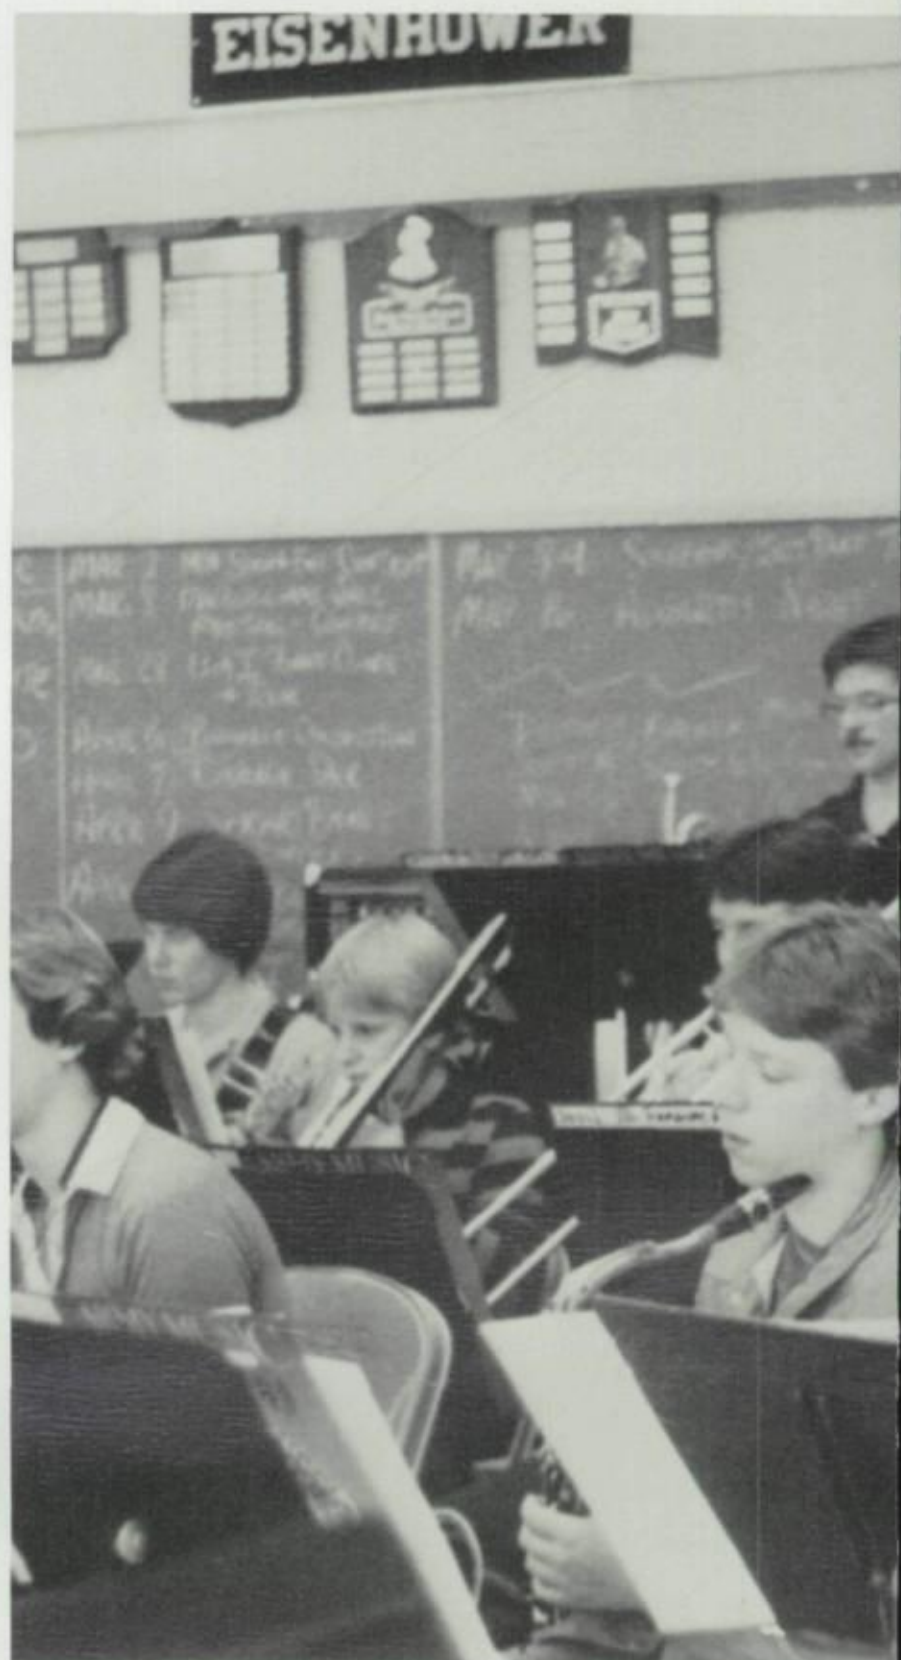

This year, all the bands here at EHS performed excellently and deserved a big round of applause.

Helping Out

Whether it's taking a film projector to Miss Kareotes' room or taking inventory in the chemistry lab, the responsibility of some assistants never let up. Assistants worked in the chemistry lab, gym, media center, and nurses's office.

Chemistry assistants had to be quite responsible. Working in a chemistry lab required care and maturity. If students were the least bit careless or showed any signs of horseplay, dangerous situations could have easily arisen.

"WAIT! I'LL DO that for you!" Lee Ann O'Dell says.

Nurse assistants had to follow those same standards. Mrs. Josefson the nurse, said that she didn't need students whose only intentions were to get out of school classes; she wanted workers! Responsibility and maturity were the top requirements for any student who applied to work in her office run by strict discipline.

Gym assistants ran errands, filed, typed, or did any number of things the P.E. department needed. Similarly, the AVA assistants took audio-visual materials to classroom and assisted students and teachers who used those materials. They also ran errands or did a number of jobs that AVA Director Ken Seidl needed to have completed. Their responsibilities were endless.

While working in these environments, students learned a great deal. By watching or assisting the faculty adviser they worked for students gained knowledge they wouldn't have learned in their classrooms. The faculty members they worked for sure appreciated their well-done.

ASSISTANTS

Student Assistants ran errands for the main office, they delivered call slips for the deans, and they worked to help organize passes. While different students had routine duties, they all learned about the organization of school offices and libraries.

Main office assistants did everything from sorting out materials to be delivered to the students to delivering counselor request slips. They sometimes spent long periods of time filing or looking up students' names for reference.

The attendance office assistants worked primarily for the deans of students, filing or taking call slips to the students, much like main office workers. In any spare time, office assistants from both offices could catch up on a few of their studies.

Library workers learned a lot about the organization of a library. They ran errands, operated the computer, shelved book, etc. Most of the time they were kept busy checking out books, pictures, or hunting for Reader's Guide magazine articles. They seldom had time to waste.

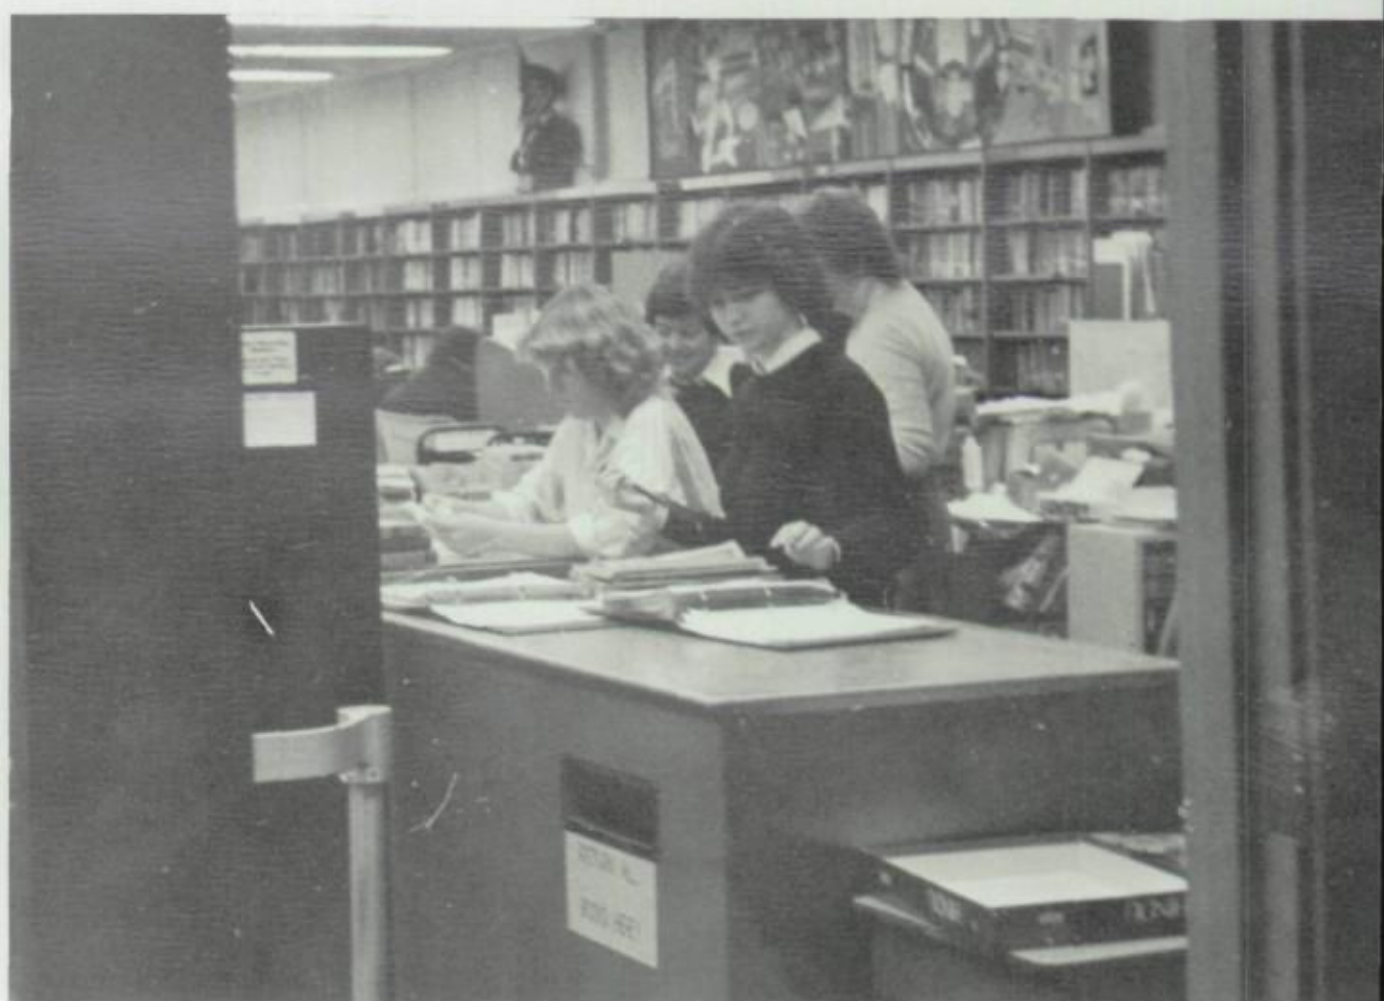

The assistants all worked continually in their settings. Those who chose the time as an opportunity to "goof" around didn't last in their helping positions. All Assistants had to be responsible, mature workers who helped the school world run smoothly.

Pantherama Staff

A student was sitting at a table. She had a notebook in front of her. She stared at the paper a few minutes and then began to write. A few minutes passed; she wrote rapidly. The copy editor came over, looked at it, and said, "Put it in the past tense!" Wanting to kill the editor, the girl wadded up the paper and threw it across the room.

Meanwhile, a boy was drawing a final layout. Suddenly, he swore and marched across the room looking for the Liquid Paper. After he "touched up" the layout, he began to work again.

A photographer came into the room. "Pictures!" The editor-in-chief sighed in relief. He handed them to the other editors.

Things were really rolling when the representative came in. Anyone could hear a pin drop when he said, "How many pages are you sending in tonight?" The editors began to sweat and the students worked faster.

Typical yearbook meetings were a lot like this. Deadlines came and went; often the staff had a hard time doing the work. Meetings began at 2:50 p.m. and lasted anywhere from 3:30 to 9:30 at night. The staff frequently sent out for food to eat while they worked.

Early evening came and the school would be quiet, except on the bottom floor. Anyone could still hear typists pecking away. The yearbook room itself had many people in it who were beginning to worry — tomorrow's homework!

The PANTHERAMA staff didn't have an easy time. Many times, ideas seemed hopeless. What held everyone together was a strong friendship. Everyone went Through Trying Times.

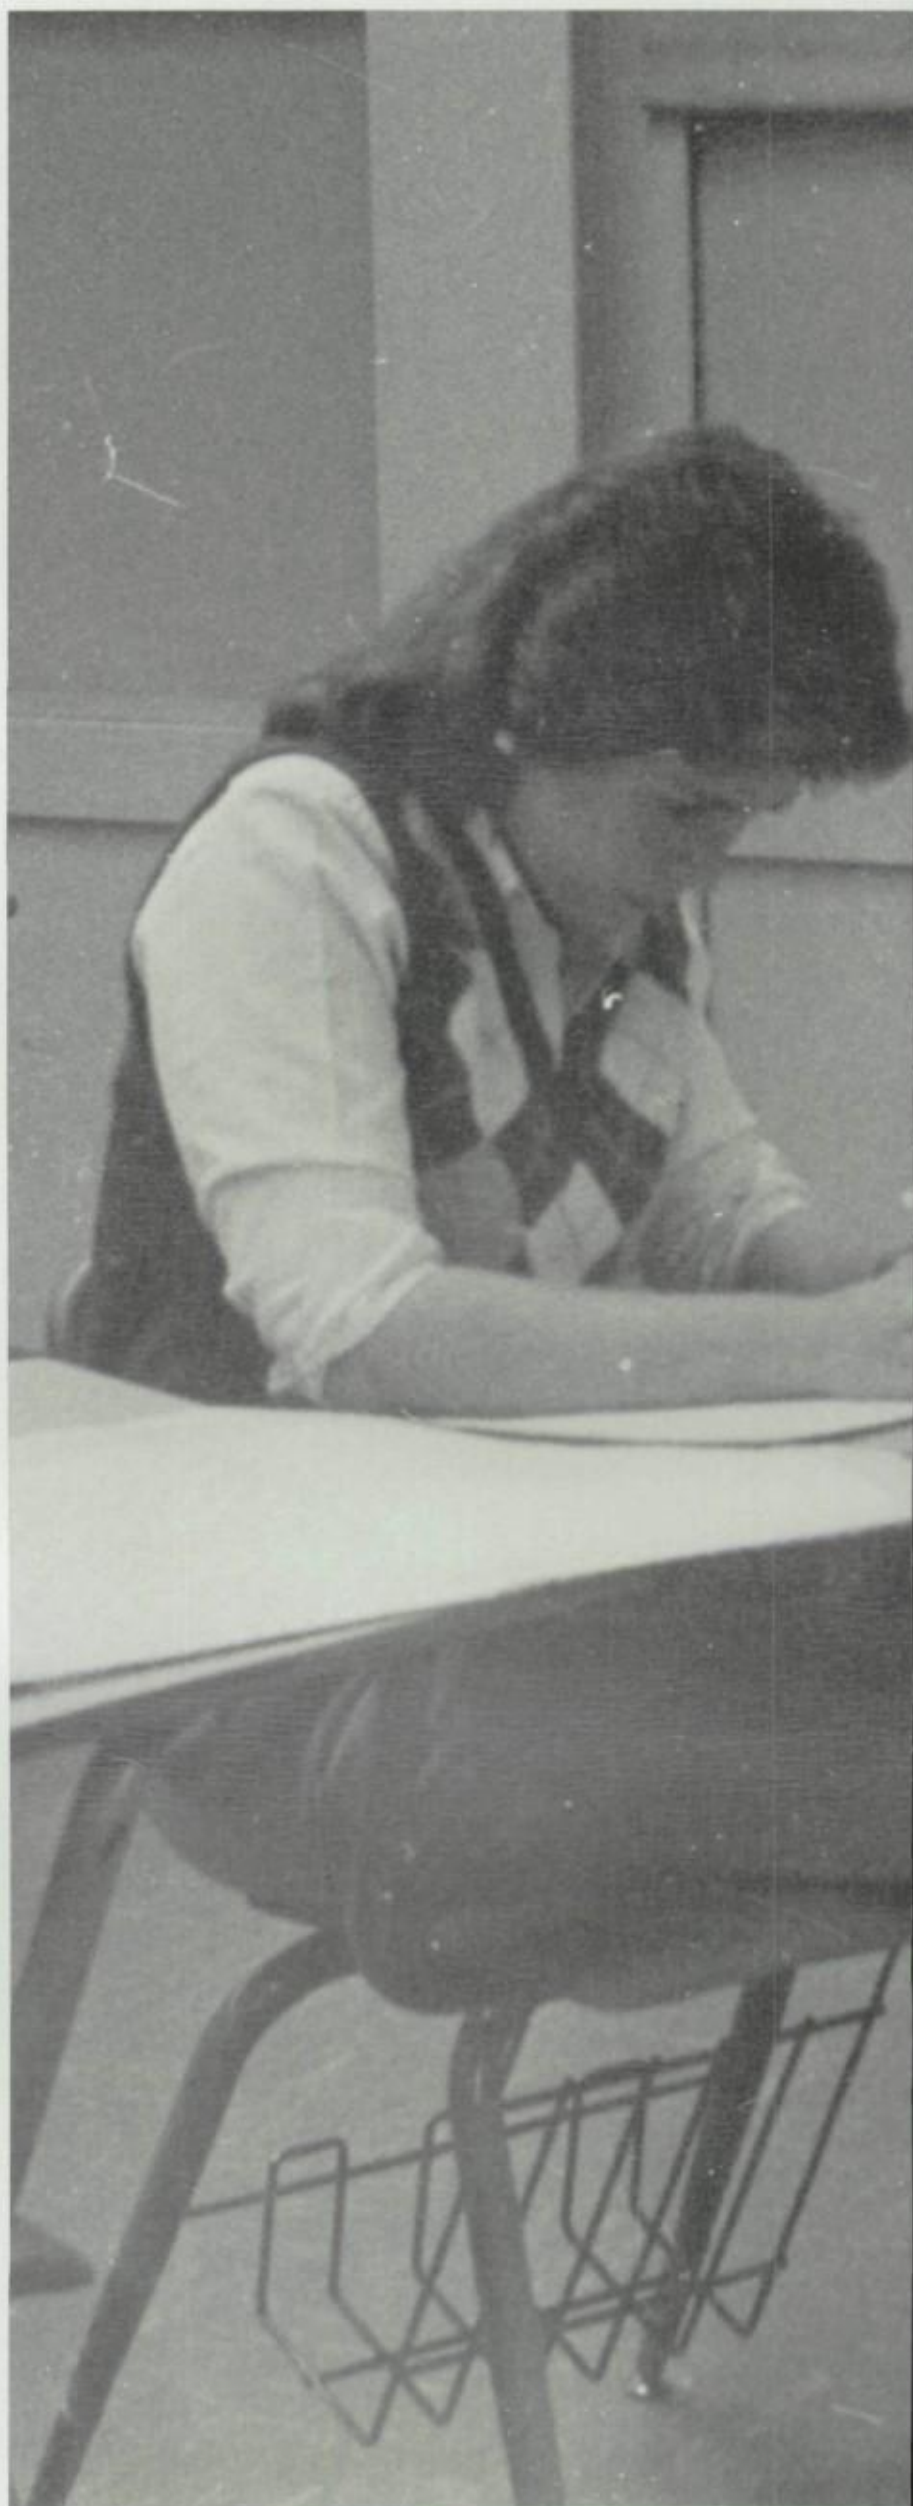

They made it! In spite of everything, they finished that book. There were fun times and not-so-fun-times, good days and bad. But they never quit working, through pain and laughter — and realized they had learned and lived life.

Faculty/Academics

Guidance & Encouragement

A school without teachers would be like a book without pages; all the knowledge provided for us would be useless without teachers to guide us.

Our faculty provided opportunities for us to learn to make a life for ourselves after we have left high school. Some students claim that teachers are too strict and not really caring, but, given a chance, most can be true friends.

Without all the custodians and cafeteria workers, it would have been virtually impossible to run the school effectively. The custodians cleaned up the messes and the cafeteria workers provided the students with healthy breakfasts and lunches.

The secretaries kept control of the "business" end. They typed all of the bulletins and answered continually ringing telephones, and were always there in the morning for the oversleepers, to give to them tardy passes to first hour.

The administration had to do more than handle disciplinary problems. They, like the counselors, were willing to listen and help the students in any way that they could be of service.

Every faculty member faced tough situations; life wasn't all "splendid" for them as students think. They recognized when students were depressed or needed help. The administration and faculty members themselves had gone Through Trying Times during the school year.

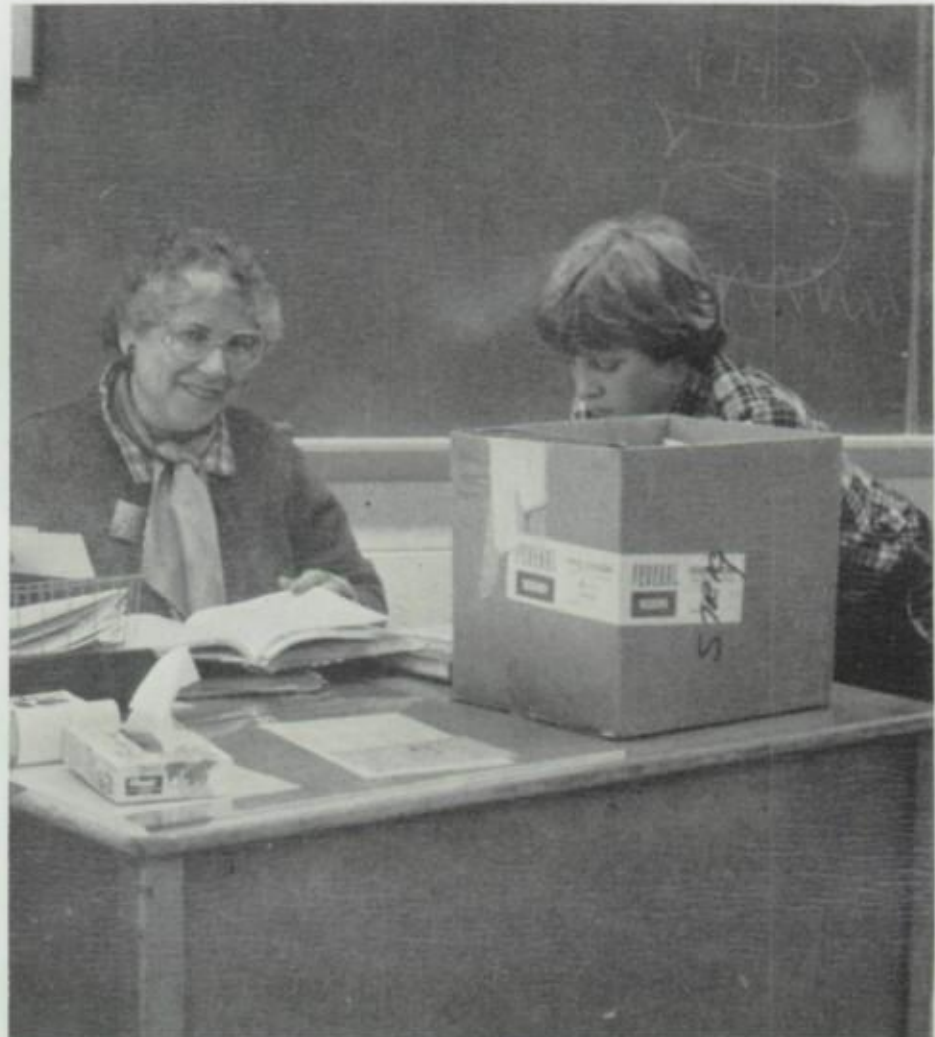

AMONG A LARGE stack of papers Mrs. Woods, working to catch up on her grading, appeared worn-out.

SOMETIMES BEING A P.E. teacher could prove to be tiring work, as evidenced by Mr. Murphy.

THROUGH TRYING TIMES

Many Trying Times

It not only takes experience to be an administrator; it takes patience. All administrators go through many tough times, their patience is sorely tried, and they often make decisions that seem unfair to students, when actually, they are benefiting us.

Our administration was caring and concerned during the year. At times they made moves the student body didn't like; other times nearly everyone was satisfied. Still at other times, the school functioned as if the administration wasn't even there.

They were behind the operations of Eisenhower; they made sure that the school functioned properly. A few rules had to be added for the school's safety, such as no more confetti at games. Other rules were mere conveniences to help Eisenhower keep up with its high standards.

Things didn't always go as it was planned. The administration sometimes had moments they'd surely like to forget; however, they pulled Through Trying Times.

Thankless Duties and Headaches

A student wants his schedule changed. He enters his counselor's office and begins to exclaim, "Change my schedule!" His counselor either looks at him funny in a "You've got to be kidding" look or he says, "Why?"

A counselor has a large job, with schedule changes, scheduling the correct classes to the correct student, college consulting, and much more. They all have that container of Anacin in the drawer for those unbearable headaches they get after a fifteen minute battle with an anxious student.

Down the hall in the office life is no bowl of cherries either. Phones always ring. Having a conversation with a secretary without having it interrupted by the phone is almost a fantasy. If they're not answering phones, they're typing or filing, or doing a number of important jobs that are usually thankless when they really deserve it.

The nurse is always rushing students in and out. A student comes in with a hangnail when it's the nurse who really needs medical help with all the guff she has to take. But she's really good at what she does and she deserves the highest praise. On a normal day, the nurse sees approximately ninety students a day. Very seldom is she tricked into letting a student go home; she makes sure the student has just cause.

The liaison officer patrols the halls, and usually brings order about even if there is nothing really wrong going on. He is at the school for our protection and deserves some recognition for all he does that the students do not see.

We are extremely grateful, or at least we should be, for all the people involved and all the thankless duties they perform. They suffer many headaches from us. They are certainly Planners and Promoters!

MRS. SIMONS, In her domain, takes a moment to break out in a smile.

MR. BRINK, PRESENTS retiring custodian Irma Archer with presents as a surprise.

Read, Write, and Speak

Who or whom? It was he or it was him? Typical questions in most language classes, these types of questions, still stumped students all year.

The English department was very well developed during the year. Advanced students were taking courses that certainly would be of help in college. Students who weren't really "into English" took some of the less time-consuming classes.

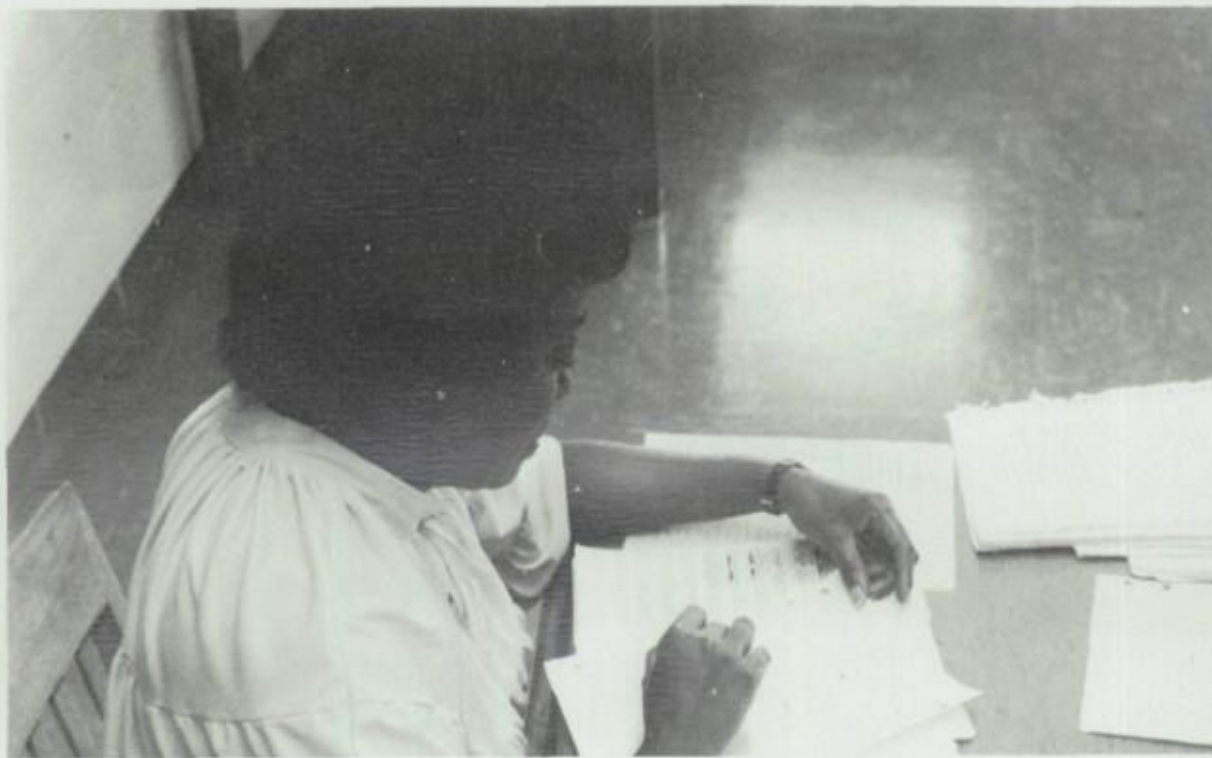

Whatever the student's desire, the English department had the class. Students who liked to write could choose creative writing or advanced composition. Grammar students took advanced grammar/research paper, where their grammatical skills were put to the test by writing a full-length term paper. Readers could take English or American lit, Imaginative or Young Adult Lit. Students who liked the "participation" in class could take Play Production, otherwise known as acting, or public speaking. The freshmen and sophomores were required to pass survey courses; divided into regular or enriched (honors) classes.

The foreign language students had a choice of Latin, German, French, or Spanish. Each language ranged from first year through fourth year. Advanced students were somewhat more independent than other foreign language students. While advanced students in Spanish spoke the language fluently, advanced Latin students translated and worked on grammar.

For three years English classes are required of all students. Foreign language classes are strongly advised for future college students. Many students this year awaited their English or foreign language class with an eagerness to learn; others decided they could definitely live without either subject. Both were subjects of concentration and memorization, and if you didn't have either one of those "abilities," the chances are you didn't crave either subject either!

Talent Everywhere

Art and music: two rapidly expanding departments. Eisenhower's art department this year included everything from 2-D Design through independent studies such as ceramics or contract studio. The music department consisted of several excellent sounding choirs and bands.

The art classes this past year were well-noted and highly regarded for its students. Many talented students preceeded through the art room, producing some beautiful pieces of art which often were winners of local art shows. From drawing and painting to ceramics and sculpture the art classes were always full. After taking the two basic art courses, art students explored many different frontiers of artistic challenges.

Music classes were also considered as organizations. The choirs sang very nicely, always with a song for everyone's pleasures. Among the different choirs were the freshman choir, advanced girls' choir, concert choir, and the Tiptones.

The bands expanded in performance this year. Always accompanying our games, the bands met as classes and practiced every day of the week. They could often be heard by other classes when the weather was nice enough for them to practice on the football field. Other times they played in their own classroom, their music secluded to all but a few classrooms which were in the band room's vicinity.

Students who participated in both departments learned a great deal; they just didn't perform. Art students not only learned how to do something; they learned that there is a purpose behind doing art and they also saw some of the artwork done by artists in the past. The music students, whether in choir or band, learned much more than just how to play their instruments or sing certain ways; they learned about the reasons and effects of their performance.

The music and art departments may continue to expand as there is new requirements for graduation that include options for both departments. Eisenhower showed much talent both places this year; they had quite talented artists and extremely good musicians.

Equations and Concepts

Many students moaned and groaned at the idea of math; others were elated at the mere mention of the word. Math was a subject students either really liked or hated; there seemed to be no middle ground.

The range of subjects ran from consumer math to calculus. That didn't mean the consumer math students had an easier time at it than the advanced students, however.

Every teacher taught a wide scope of math. It was just as challenging to teach the lower levels as the higher ones.

$E=mc^2$; one of the most easily recalled equations, yet few know its true meaning. Not all science was based on equations thrown together to mean something. Science was very broad in spectrum, starting from the basics such as comprehensive science to the complicated chemistry and physics.

An understanding of the wide range of sciences was difficult, but teachers illustrated in such a way that students could grasp the meaning.

When there was an explosion in the chemistry lab, many considered it a furthering of knowledge: never put sodium and water in the same test tube again!

Facts and Figures

Boring vs. Challenging

Who won the American Revolution? If the answer that came to mind was the New York Yankees, boning up on U.S. History would not be a bad idea.

Social Studies was not only the basic history courses. The department included such subjects as psychology, sociology, economics, and geography.

Many students hated the idea of social studies classes. "They're boring. The teachers talk too much." Sometimes to get a point across, the teachers did talk from thirty to fifty minutes. Social studies was many ideas and points meshed together. What some called boring, others called challenging. There were few other classes where answers could be discussed and/or debated, something that could be done in most social studies classes.

Different from most other subjects, social studies was required of all students for three years. Freshmen took geography and sophomores chose from a world history or religions class, or another geography class. Most juniors were in U.S. History and junior and seniors took psychology, sociology, economics, or advanced U.S. History.

Facts and figures thrown around in social studies classes had to be memorized; tests were usually based strictly on notes or similar materials. Some students despised the idea of learning the dates of THIS war and the leaders of THAT war.

Every social studies teacher had his/her own way of operating the classroom; no two were alike. One relied on the textbook for much of the material; another relied on note-taking from supplementary materials. Still, another used films or visual aides.

Grades in social studies were usually good or bad; there weren't too many mediocre grades. Most students either liked it or disliked it; few were indifferent.

Like any other class, the ones who enjoyed social studies worked very hard and they reaped the benefits of becoming well-rounded people.

Ways of Wealth

Wealth. It's on our minds. It may be lodged at the backs of our minds, just coming out occasionally; nevertheless, that desire for extravagant things is there. We have an "impulse" for a nice thing, then suddenly, it's gone.

Or we may flash our wealth openly — or the desire for it — always striving for the best to show our money.

But we need to know how we can obtain that wealth. We can be industrious and do helpful things which require a shopsman's skills, such as woodworking, wiring, or simply tinkering with mechanical things.

Some of us claim our wealth by office skills. We may be good typists, record-keepers, or secretaries with excellent short-hand skill.

And then we can be good with food, clothes, children, or a combination of these. We might be cooks, seamstresses, or baby-sitters. It always helps to have skills around the home.

Finally, we need to know how to handle that money once we get it. Can you write a check? Balance the books? Pay your bills?

Any one of these ways to acquire and keep your wealth can be taught through courses in the industrial arts, business, and home economics departments. Most are one-semester courses.

So get in there and learn all about "wealth." If you know how to get it and how to handle it, then go for it! And then you can dedicate your success to the courses you took in high school.

Sweat and Tears

Sweat pouring down the face, heart pumping gallons of blood through the body, face blushing beet-red with exertion: this is a symptom of the disease Physical Education.

Physical education was a class where all the day's built up steam could be let off. Some classes were held in the gym, while others took place at bowling alleys, golf courses, swimming pools, skating rinks, and so on. All of these classes gave students a chance to try new and different kinds of sports without spending quite a bit of extra time.

When people were in gym, they ran and stomped and rid themselves of all the energy they had all bottled up. It brought around morale because students excelled in a sport.

While some students anxiously awaited the hour in which they could get "physical," others dreaded the class. Sometimes it was because they were afraid to be laughed at; at other times it was because they had forgotten their clothes and didn't want to face the teacher.

Not all physical education classes were free for any student to take advantage of. Bowling, racquetball, co-ed sports and swimming all cost over $50.00 a semester — many students were excluded from the classes because of this fact.

Although the majority of students is in physical ed or one of the other phys-ed classes (bowling, etc) some students remain in driver education or health classrooms. These are requirements of sophomore and freshman students. Others stay in study halls or help in the office because of an excuse from physical education.

It might have seemed a drudgery at times, but weren't all those stinky, sweaty clothes worth it?

Special Services

Special Faculty

Special Education is probably one of the most overlooked departments this year. The special education is offered to those students interested in a slower and more personal classroom situation. In this department the basic subjects were offered along with the Vocational and Work programs. The teachers were very interested in the students that they worked with. They felt that they were helping the students meet their needs of acceptance, gratitude, and praise for their efforts.

Although the students are in a special department, they are very enthusiastic in showing school spirit by joining school activities. The teachers have done very good jobs with the students and their accomplishments should be highly acknowledged.

Other faculty members who were of a special help were librarians. They organized a very resourceful learning center for all students whether for an involved term paper or for recreation reading to use.

Special Services

Faculty Personnel

Whether it was by cleaning the halls for the messy students or making our meals for us, student-faculty personnel services were extremely appreciated during the year — in more ways than one.

The cafeteria workers started their jobs early in the morning, setting up for the breakfast crowd. They also began preparing the food which came from ARA Service for the lunch periods. They ended their jobs after every single student had cleared the lunchroom and everything was cleaned up.

The custodians worked night and day cleaning out the garbage cans, sweeping the floors, cleaning the chalkboards, and making things much more convenient for the school day. Their jobs were certainly not easy at times; fifteen-hundred teenagers can make some pretty goodsized messes! But we certainly did appreciate all of their efforts.

Through Trying Times

We've all indefinitely had times when we've said to ourselves, "I sure could use a friend right now." It is not uncommon to be frenzied after that two-and-a-half page examination or that startling oral report you just gave; in fact, it's quite normal.

When we look at the pictures of our friends, we will remember all the people we shared laughs and cried with; we will remember that hilarious date and that awful heartbreaking romance. We will remember the joys of those A's and the disappointments of the D's.

We shall reflect on those mornings we couldn't be dragged from the bed and the afternoons we had to stay for detention; those many nights of homework and those few of freedom. Those mornings we knew that report cards awaited us in homeroom will also haunt us.

The conversations we had at lunch will bring us a few laughs but the agony of returning to class at the bell will bring back the moans.

Not a all the times in high school were bad; not all were good. Many were rough and many were smooth. In fact, there was quite a nice conglomeration of the two.

mornings we couldn't be

After we have left this high school we will be on our own. The real world may seem particularly easy or particularly rough, depending on how the student did in his high school years. The real world will be much more different.

No matter what the times are like, then, we will have those high school remembrances. We will have already come Through Trying Times.

Sleeping in Class Doesn't Pay off!

Once upon a time, in a little bean town (soy, that is), there lived a poor little red-haired boy named Scott. To earn a little extra money, Scott shined his neighbors' shoes. He walked from door to door. Every-day after school he would ask the neighborhood residents if they would like their shoes shined.

One afternoon he approached Mrs. Quimby's house and knocked on the door. Slowly, the big door creaked open. Because Scott didn't see anyone inside he called out.

"Hello. Is anyone home?" Into the darkness Scott called. Since no one answered, he stepped inside.

"Excuse me, Mrs. Quimby? Are you home Mrs. Quimby? I've come to shine your shoes." No one answered.

As Scott stepped in a little farther, the door slammed shut. He ran for the door and pulled on it. It wouldn't budge. Behind him, at the end of a darkened hall, he saw Mrs. Quimby.

She began to move toward him with a slow mechanical step. Scott clung by the door. A cold sweat was building on his forehead. As she heard him he could see that she carried a long knife in her hand. He covered his eyes with his hands and soon felt a sharp jab on his shoulder.

"Scott! Scott!" yelled Mrs. Woods, as she poked his shoulder with her pointer, "If I catch you sleeping in class again . . ." — by Scott Carney

AFTER ENDURING THE long, hot hours of the first few days of school students vacated the building quickly.

MANY HOURS, INCLUDING hours during the school day, are needed for the band members in order for them to perfect the music that is enjoyed during pep assemblies and athletic games.

AT DAY'S END.

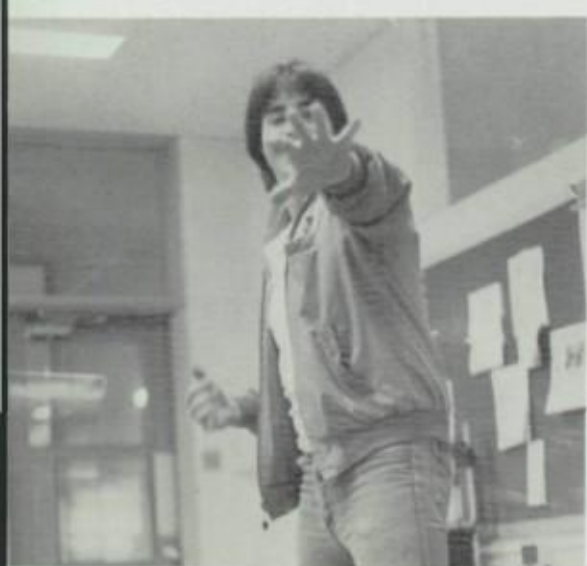

KRIS HEBEL SINGS at the choir concert.

JENNIFER SCHAFER SOARS to great heights as she sings at the choir concert.

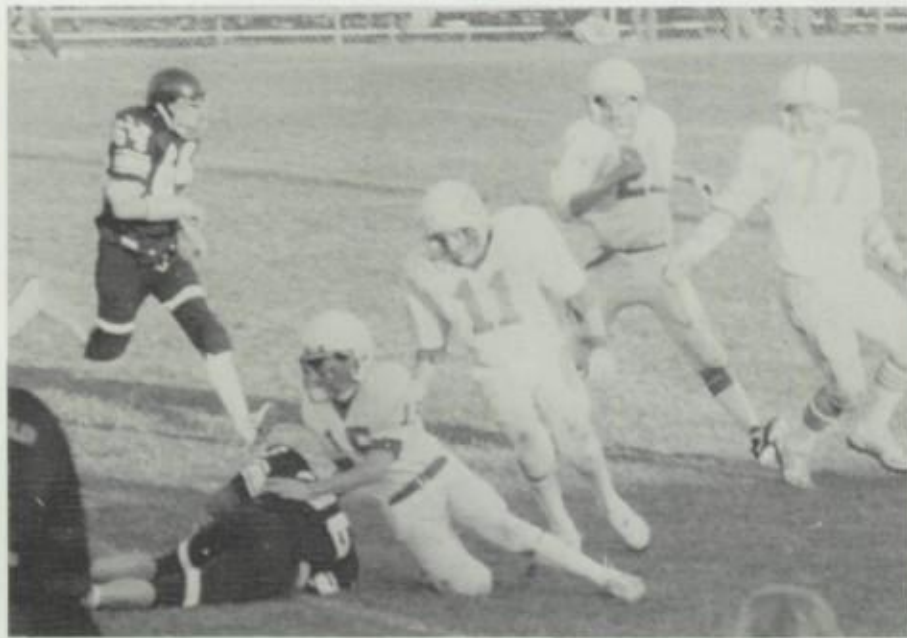

BAND MEMBERS, Barb Freidank, Mary Floyd, and Sherri Griffin prepare themselves before playing at a parade.

Senior, Roger West, says, "Don't Shoot!"

FOOTBALL PRACTICE SOMETIMES was painful, especially when the Panthers were tackled four to one.

AT THE TURKEY Tournament the high-stepping Cheerleaders performed during the half-time.

THE POPPERS DANCED for the students at the basketball assembly.

EISENHOWER'S MARCHING BAND is proudly leading the Labor Day parade in downtown Decatur.

Candid Candid

ONE OF THE MORE popular P.E. classes, archery was a class where students could relieve their "frustrations."

THORA HOWARD GRACIOUSLY accepted Jack Blythe's "kiss" during the fall play, "Don't Drink the Water."

Memories to Trying Moments

Their advertisements will remind us of those supportive businesses throughout town when we were in school. Their support helped make the yearbook possible; their support was greatly appreciated.

The index plays a big part in a yearbook. The pages of an index lead us to pictures of all the girls and guy we ever admired throughout our high school years.

Seeing the pictures reminds us of all the fun we had while we were in high school, in a certain club, or the headaches caused by a deadline narrowly met.

Years from now when we take our yearbooks from their dusty shelves, memories of joy and pleasure, tears and laughs will come back to us. Bad times as well as good will return to our memories and we will remember how we made it through. Along with the times of panic that we experienced, we will remember the chances we took or could have taken that may have changed our lives. All our choices merged into memory.

After we each sort out these memories, we will be left with feelings for probably each emotion that is possible. It may be hard to tell whether we're laughing to hold back the tears or crying because of a hilarious memory. We may sit in loneliness for a while, then we may feel instantly better upon remembering practical jokes we pulled or were the victim of, or the funny misfortune we laughed at when one of our friends fell down on the icy lot, insisting he wasn't hurt as he laughed along with us.

We will be left with those memories of life when we went Through Trying Times in our High School years.

LEADING THE MARCHING band down Wood Street on a Saturday morning was drum major Jeff Henricker.

Through Trying Times

ENCOURAGING THE TEAM to victory were the junior-varsity cheerleaders at an assembly.

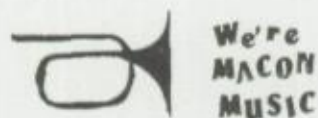

AFTER LONG HOURS of work the Senior spirit hall was finally completed.

PRESSED FOR TIME Helen Fox worked to complete an assignment for her marketing class.

PERFORMING FOR HER advanced acting class, Thora Howard pantomimes.

The End Came . . .

Survival of the Fittest

Sooner than most realized, teachers turned their talks towards final examinations. Study hours would soon be coming for some; others would simply blow them off.

It had been a tough year. At times there had been some great discouragement and dismay, but often the struggle through those times resulted in a rewarding thought or feeling.

Of course there had been the good and bad moments. Even when someone got to be discouraged, his/her best friends could usually cheer him/her up.

High school pressures were just a small part of life. Many students were preparing for four or two long years in college. Others anticipated marriage and/or full-time jobs. Many additional trying times lie ahead.

Students did have something to show for almost every trying time they went through. That unbearable term paper in Mrs. Lauderdale's class may have been hours upon hours of work, but the "A" sure felt good, didn't it? Night after night on yearbook sure wasn't always fun, but it was rewarding. Teachers didn't always love their jobs either, but they did get satisfaction when they thought they were successful in their jobs.

Firm friendships were welded that will last a lifetime. At some times they could even be annoying; that's life. But when they were needed they usually were always there. Whether they could be of help by giving advice, or simply by being able to make laughter. And now it was over. The summer was ahead. What would happen then? And next year? The survivors could face it; they had faced it before, so they could face it again. Life would go on as before, only now with more enrichment. All had survived Through Trying Times.

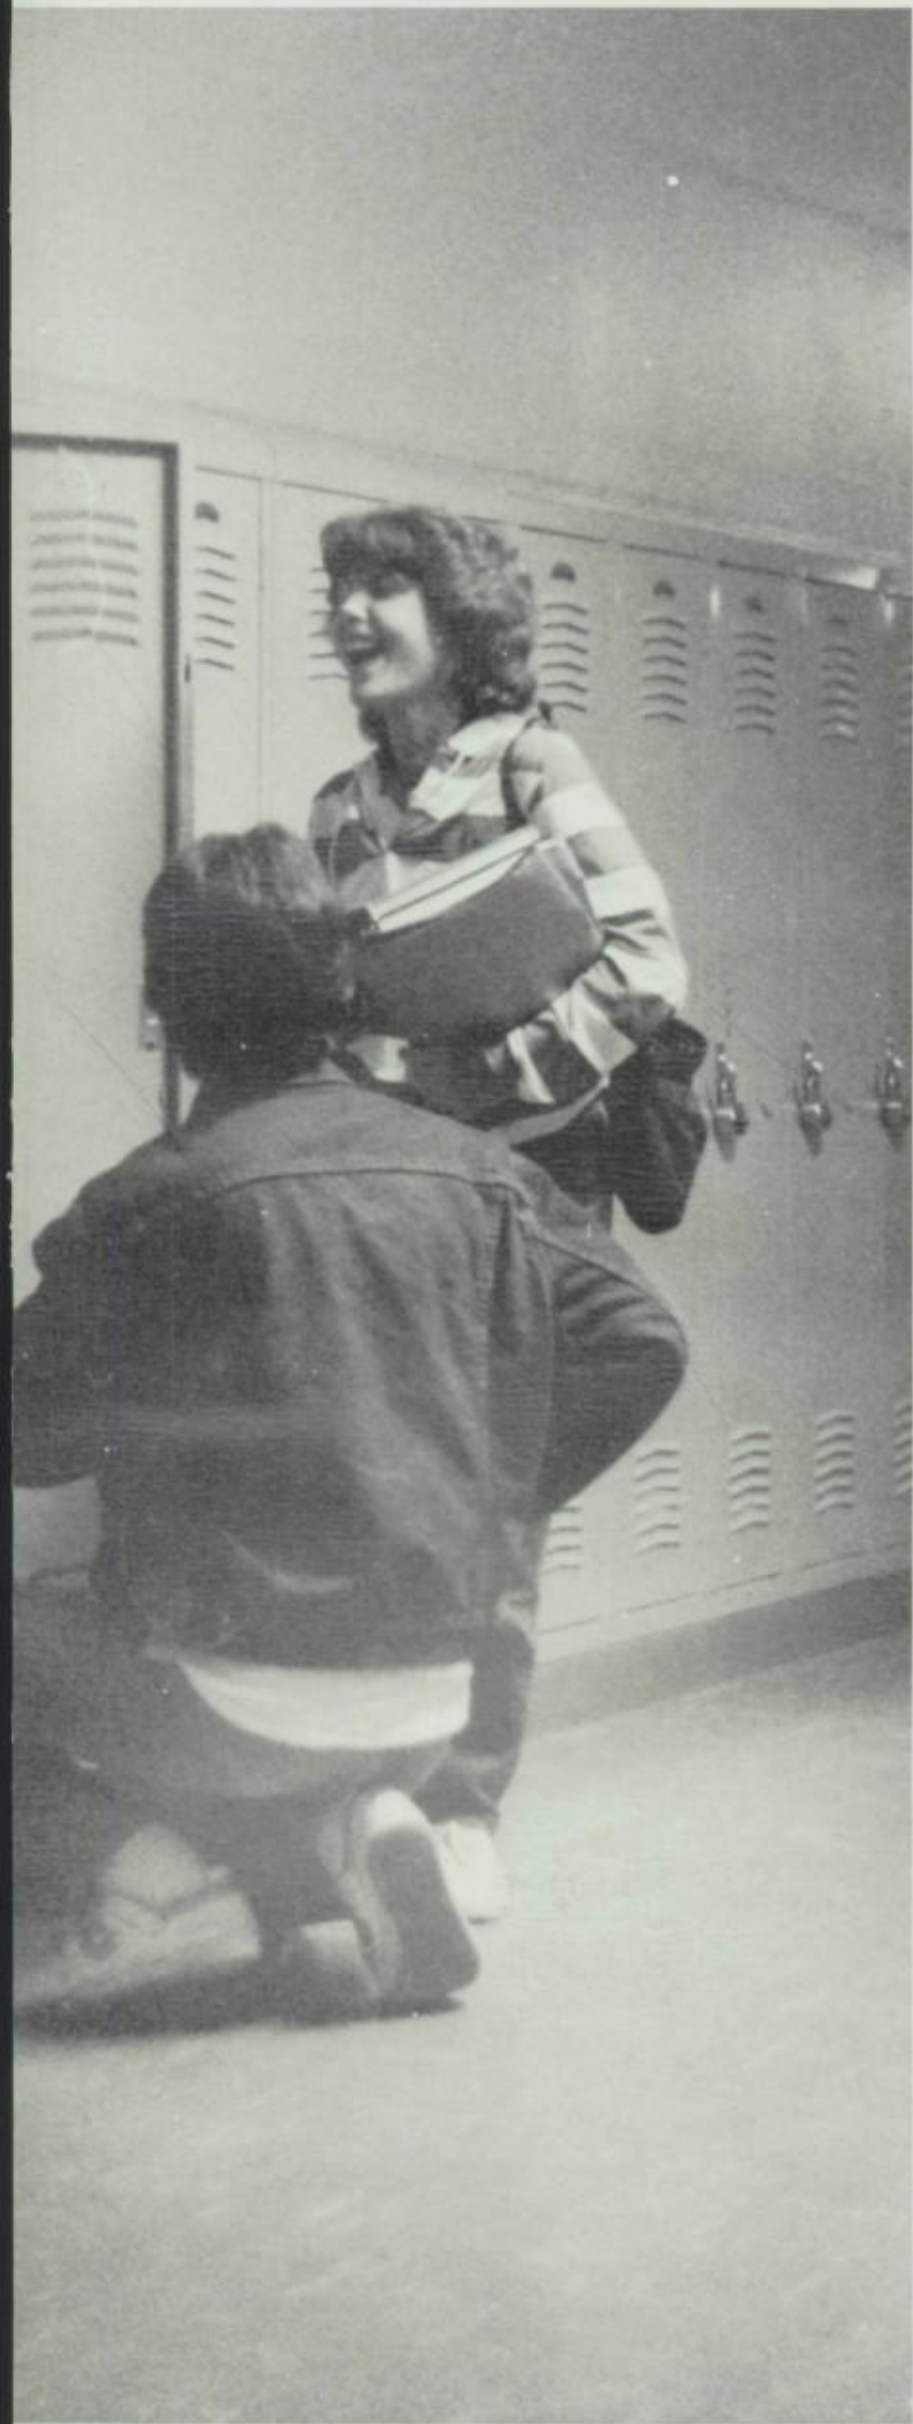

ON A SATURDAY yearbook work session were Beth Cuddeback and Bruce McGee.

AFTER MUCH WORK in writing by Bill Sebok, Mrs. Lauderdale returned his term paper.

MOMENTS SHARED WILL be remembered always, even if they were spent at lockers, as Tom Zingale spent with Lee Ann Brownlow.

JEFF KISSELL TRIED to catch up on some of his assigned library assistant work behind the book check out counter.

LIAISON OFFICER JERRY Carr, always accessible to students, is getting caught up on his paperwork.

EISENHOWER HIGH SCHOOL:
Through Trying Times.

THROUGH TRYING TIMES

Behind the Times

Finally it was over. Teachers began preparing for final examinations; students either began to study immensely or not at all. Books were collected, term papers were turned in, and everyone began to prepare for summer vacation.

Those times were now behind. One more school year was past. There had been the times of laughter and the times of tears. There had been moments of sheer confusion and pressure, but also of extreme hilarity and joy.

Seniors anxiously had mailed

PANTHERAMA members experienced their own trying times during the school year. Whether it was from the pressure of an oncoming deadline or the mistake made on that almost perfect final layout sheet, that moment of thinking of a solution was there.

As editor, I would like to thank everyone involved in the production of the 1984 PANTHERAMA. As evidenced by the list to the right, this year's staff was large. We had lots of good workers. Sometimes we got on each others' nerves, but we survived. Making the book was fun; making the deadlines was hard. Often, communications were lost and things just turned out chaotic. This isn't unusual in a working relationship.

A great deal of thanks goes out to our teachers, who willingly and sometimes reluctantly let us slide by on our luck to get out of class to work on the year-announcements. They awaited that night when they would proceed across that stage with diploma in hand.

As lockers were cleaned and final grades were prepared, some students looked back and sighed, thinking it had been a pretty good year after all. Others exclaimed, "Thank God it's over!"

And it WAS over. There will be many trying times in our life, and we made it through our trying times because we never stopped trying.

book. Appreciation should be shown to the entire faculty, not just our teachers, for understanding and support when we needed it.

Over the year we got to be best friends with the custodians and the secretaries, who helped us get through out panic times at times when no one else was able. Thanks to them.

Lastly, thanks to our adviser Miss Kareotes, for helping us through everything. Her support could not have been absent and our book still get finished.

Thanks also to our parents for being understanding while we worked away on our book after school for hours nearly every day.

We hope this book pleases our student body. A lot of time and dedication went into it. We hope that it will mean something to you in the future; we KNOW it will for us. — Bruce McGee, Editor

Colophon

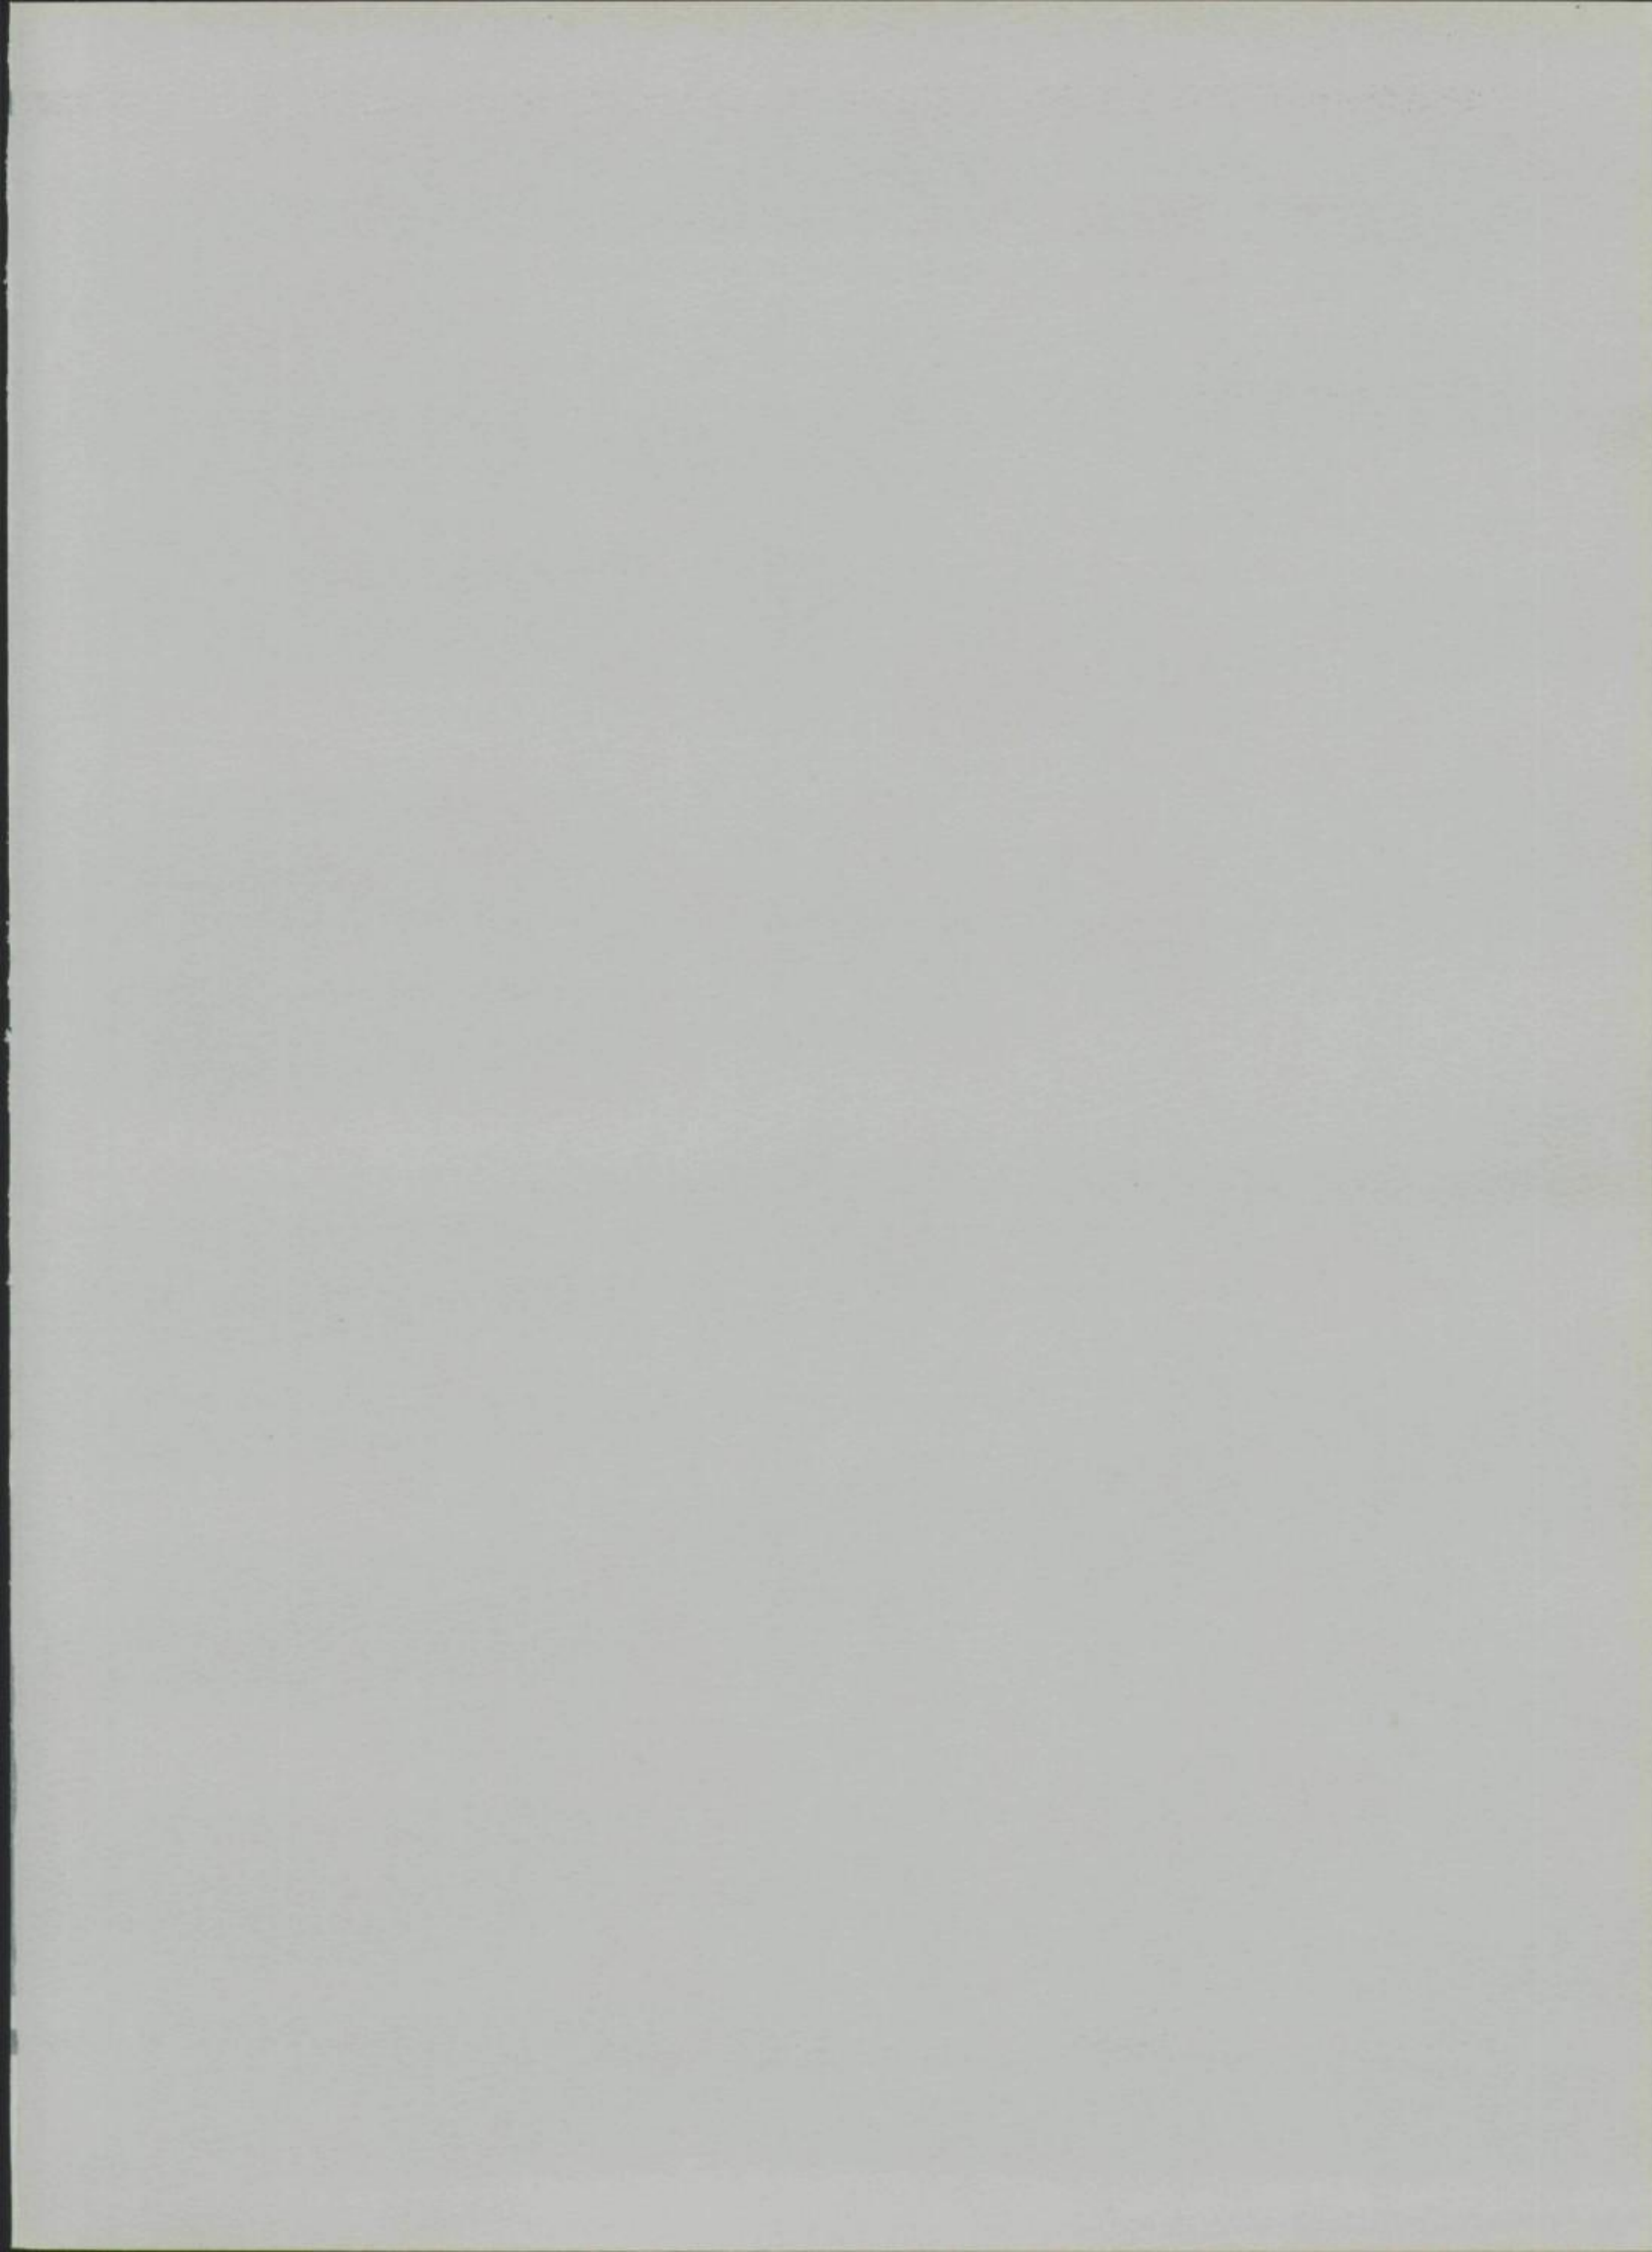

COLOPHON: This 1984 volume of the PANTHERAMA yearbook is a 9" x 12" book, with a silk-screen cover of 160 point binders' board. The 65 pound grey colortext paper end sheets were printed on 65 pound ivory stock. Times Roman italics type face was used on 80 pound Bordeaux paper. Our book was published with excellent journalistic standards by Herff Jones Yearbooks, Marceline, Missouri. We are extremely grateful to our yearbook representative, Mr. Bob Donnelly, for his constant guidance, patience, and encouragement.

The yearbook staff also wants to thank Mr. Ken Seidl for his photographic advice; Borsay Studios for their quick, professional senior class portraits, club and team pictures, Homecoming and other school events photography; and Mr. Jim Fletcher for the underclassmen pictures.

We once again want to show our great appreciation to all the administrators, faculty, secretaries, custodians and patrons, and parents for their cooperation and sympathetic understanding.

Through Trying Times.
